Burning Sun Sets Record For Drought In 27 States

Covers Bigger Area Than at Any Other Time in History.

Battle for Relief Of Farmers Sped

Aridity Unusually Early; Wheat Hits $1 as Crops Wither.

A desert-like sun baked many States yesterday as Weather Bureau officials have reported the drought had spread to three-fourths of the country and was "the most extensive" dry period in history.

J. B. Kincer, chief of the bureau's climate and crop division, disclosed the drought now grips 27 States extending from Maine to California.

"It covers more of the country than any other drought on record," he added. "It also is unusual because it comes so early in the year. Such conditions ordinarily don't set in before midsummer."

Concerned over the situation, Agricultural Adjustment Administration officials discussed plans to permit farmers in the stricken area to plant forage crops on land rented by the Government in months to control production of corn, wheat, rye, barley and other crops.

Cattle Bids Asked.

Harry L. Hopkins, president of the Federal Surplus Relief Corporation, took cognizance of the far-flung drought by requesting meat packers to submit telegraphic bids on cattle to be purchased from financially distressed farmers and distributed among unemployed in cities.

Directors of the Sioux City (Iowa) Chamber of Commerce voted to ask President Roosevelt and Secretary Wallace to release signers of corn-hog contracts from all crop reduction obligations. A committee was named to enlist other civic organizations and Governors in the move.

Crops withered and rivers receded yesterday in temperatures which ranged through the 90s and reached a peak of 108 degrees at Oakes, N. Dak.

A forest fire broke forth in Minnesota and Idaho woodlands and a huge marsh in the vicinity of Norwalk, Ohio, dehydrated by weeks of scanty rainfall and intense heat, caught fire.

Two Die of Heat.

A farmer died of the heat in an Iowa hayfield, the Associated Press reported. A similar death occurred at St. Paul.

Widespread crop peril prompted traders on the Minneapolis Grain Exchange to bid the price of July wheat to $1.00½, the first time that

Garner Friend Killed in Crash

Sexton, Former Secretary, Trapped in Wrecked Plane in Texas.

El Paso, Tex., May 29 (AP).—Harry L. Sexton, 50, United States customs collector at San Antonio and secretary to Vice President John N. Garner when the latter was a Representative, was killed today in a plane crash near the American Airway Field.

The pilot, Lieut. C. F. Edge, of the United States Coast Guard, was burned. He said the motor stopped and he tried to make a safe landing in the desert. He escaped from the ship as it started to burn. Apparently Sexton was knocked unconscious.

Sexton, a World War officer, made his home in Brownsville, Tex. He is survived by his wife and three children.

Congress Works While City Plays On Memorial Day

As virtually all Washington in holiday mood today spreads picnic feasts under green-budding trees, or slams golf balls from the first tee, members of House and Senate will bend their backs to complete the legislative program for this session.

The House will start debate on the silver bill while the Senate will continue debate on the reciprocal tariff bill. Senators even will be deprived of talking as long as they want, because at noon today there becomes effective an unanimous consent agreement limiting debate for each Senator to 15 minutes on any amendment and 20 minutes on the bill.

Revenge Killer Feared Strikes After 18 Years

Chicago, May 29 (U.P.).—For 18 years Phillip Scallate lived in fear of reprisal from friends of a man he killed.

Editor Finds Old Enemies Girding for Renewal of Struggle, With German Rearmament as Most Dangerous Factor in Situation.

(Editor's Note: Following is the first of a series of ten articles on the puzzling European situation by Hamilton Fish Armstrong, who has just returned from a trip to the principal capitals. Mr. Armstrong deals extensively with the possibility of war abroad.)

1—INTERIM.

By Hamilton Fish Armstrong,
Editor of Foreign Affairs.

Gen. Tasker H. Bliss used to tell of an evening during the war when he was sitting late in the War Department with Secretary Baker. It was the night when the first American convoy of troops was reaching the submarine zone, and in their anxiety neither of them could go home to sleep. "General," asked Mr. Baker, "how long do you suppose this war will last?" After hesitating a time, Gen. Bliss replied: "By the analogy of other great wars, I should say 30 or 40 years. There may be a pause, an armed truce, while both sides lick their wounds and collect their forces. Maybe some of the contestants will meanwhile disappear; perhaps some will even change sides. But then the war will go on again, until one side or the other is obliterated as a fighting force, or until civilization ends in a chaotic breakdown."

Looking back at that evening, after the war was over, Gen. Bliss liked to think that he had been wrong because the League of Nations had come in as a new factor to limit the ferocious forces at the command alike of victor and vanquished.

What would he say today? His historical insight would force him to appraise the situation realistically. He would see that after a decade of certain peace, with snatches of sun at Locarno, or when the Pact of Paris was signed, or when

Girl's Torch Death Clews Hint Suicide

Sacramento, Calif., May 29 (AP).—Deepening mystery surrounded the strange fire death of Miss Virginia L. Johnson, attractive society girl, after an autopsy today disclosed burns were the sole cause of death, and Chief of Police William Hallanan declared he was unable to say whether the girl was murdered or took her own life.

Her kerosene-drenched body was found late last night in a garage. The autopsy disclosed she had not been criminally attacked, and the only scar found on the body was from an old injury.

The grief-stricken father, Charles G. Johnson, State treasurer and candidate for Governor, issued a statement describing her death as a "fiendish murder" and called on authorities to meet "brutalities and fiendish crimes" with renewed vigilance.

Girl's Fingerprints Found.

Hours after the scorched body of the pretty 22-year-old college girl had been taken from a garage near her home, authorities announced the discovery that Miss Johnson's fingers resembled those which made the prints on the jug of kerosene which had fed the death pyre.

Unlighted matches found nearby were pronounced similar to those in the Johnson home. Both discoveries were made by Leslie Cox.

Baltimore Firm Pays Premium for Bonds

Cumberland, Md., May 29, (Spl.). W. W. Lanahan & Co., Baltimore, was awarded the $100,000 issue of Front street improvement bonds by the mayor and city council yesterday at $107.68, one of the highest bids the city has ever received.

Richest Indian Dies as Suits Haunt Heirs

Los Angeles, May 29 (AP).—The world's wealthiest Indian, Jackson Barnett, 92, was found dead in his Wilshire boulevard mansion here today by the white woman whose marriage to him was annulled by the Government but who was permitted to remain as his housekeeper.

The woman whose marriage to him was annulled by the Government last April 1, after more than 13 years of legal fights over control of his fortune, is Mrs. Annie Laurie Lowe, a Kansas widow half his age.

Barnett apparently was stricken with a heart attack as he was dressing.

Tangle of Lawsuits Cover Many States

Death yesterday wrote its ending to one of the most fantastic Indian tales of the present generation when Jackson Barnett, wealthy Creek Indian ward of the United States Government, died in Los Angeles.

Life for Barnett—known to his neighbors as "Crazy Jack" and to the country as one of the most wealthy of the fabulously rich Oklahoma oil Indians—since 1920 had been one unceasing round of trouble, with wealth a cursing burden. He moved to the Happy Hunting Grounds of his ancestors leaving behind a tangled skein of litigation stretching from the District of Columbia to Los Angeles.

Washington Woman Dies in Tarboro, N. C.

Mrs. Yvon Pike, widow of Yvon Pike, of Washingon and Leesburg, Va., died Monday in Tarboro, N. C., friends here were informed yesterday.

Formerly Miss Ella Paxton, of Riverdale, near Lexington, Va. Mrs. Pike is survived by five daughters: Mrs. Roscoe M. Packard, of Boston; Mrs. William A. Goodman, of Cincinnati; Mrs. Alfred T. Smith, wife of Brig. Gen. Alfred T. Smith, U. S. A.; Mrs. Spencer Bass, of Tarboro, N. C.; and Miss Dore Pike, of Leesburg, Va., and five grandchildren.

Funeral services will be held this afternoon at 4 o'clock in Oak Hill Chapel.

Quintuplets and Mother to Live; Offer of $50,000 Is Reported

North Bay, May 29 (U.P.).—Mrs. Olivia Dionne, 25, who gave birth to quintuplet girl babies early yesterday, slowly was regaining strength tonight. Dr. Allan Roy Dafoe, country doctor attending the case, was confident the mother and all the children will live.

Meantime reports were circulated that a group of Chicago men had telephoned Oliva Dionne, 31, father of the record family, offering him $50,000 to exhibit the five tiny baby girls at the World Fair there.

All visitors today were stopped at gates leading to the little log house 5 miles from here, where the Dionnes are attempting to eke existence from a partly paid-for farm.

Dr. Dafoe insisted Mrs. Dionne must have absolute quiet and rest.

The quintuplets, first recorded in Canada and among the few known in modern medical history, were kept in baskets and fed milk from eye droppers.

The doctor termed the babies "identical" quintuplets. He said the case was attracting attention of physicians in many parts of the United States and Canada.

The Dionnes are poor and the physician said he was giving the case all his time without charge. He also was paying for medicine and special foods for mother and children.

The six other Dionne children, ranging in age from 11 months to 7 years, are staying with neighbors.

The babies, so far, have not been named, their father said. Explaining the mother was still too sick to think of names for all of them and he was too busy with his farm work.

"We hadn't agreed on a name for one baby, let alone five," the farmer said.

He thought it "would be very nice to have the five little girls all grow up to womanhood together," but didn't know if it would be possible to dress them all alike. "That might cost too much," he said.

The North Bay Lion's Club raised $36.50 last night as a first gift for the quintuplets.

C. I. Green, a merchant at Callendar, said he received the telephone call offering $50,000 for exhibition of the quintuplets. He said the man who talked to him was a "Mr Spiers," who was sending an agent by airplane to the Dionne farm tomorrow.

U. S. Stand Lifts Arms Accord Hope

Davis Thrills Geneva as Roosevelt Urges "Any Measures."

Soviet Startles With Request That All Arms Be Dropped.

Geneva, May 29 (AP).—Statesmen who came to Geneva expecting to praise disarmament and then bury it were electrified with new hope today by an American proposal to strike at the roots of war by controlling the munitions traffic and a Russian plea for complete abolition of armament.

Speaking with the authority of President Roosevelt, Norman Davis, American Ambassador at Large, told the opening session of the disarmament conference that the United States is ready to join in "a substantial and proportionate reduction of naval tonnage" and an international convention regulating or eliminating sales of war materials.

"The American people and Government are convinced," he declared, "that the production and traffic in engines of death and the profits resulting therefrom must be controlled or eliminated."

Will Forego European Politics.

"President Roosevelt," he said, "has authorized me to summarize the attitude and policy of the United States as follows:

"We are prepared to cooperate in every practicable way in efforts to secure a general disarmament agreement. We are furthermore willing in connection with a general disarmament convention, to negotiate a universal pact of nonaggressor and to join with other nations in conferring on international problems growing out of any treaties to which we are a party.

"The United States will not, however, participate in European political negotiations and settlements and will not make any commitment whatever to use its armed forces for the settlement of any dispute anywhere."

Regarding munitions traffic, Davis asserted that the "American Government is ready to join any measure for suppressing this evil and is prepared to negotiate in connection with a disarmament treaty that would deal drastically with this problem."

Maxim Litvinoff, commissar for foreign affairs of the Soviet Union, called for complete abolition of armaments.

"Armed peace is only an armistice," he asserted. "It is a negation of the basic principle of the Kellogg antiwar pact."

The Russian proposed that the conference, collapse of which had been freely predicted for months, be made a permanent body to safeguard the security of all nations and the peace of the world.

Favors Universal Pacts.

Universal, or European, security pacts, supplemented by regional agreements of mutual assistance, also were proposed by Litvinoff, who declared that the agreement should be entered into on a general

2 College Years "Loss," Student Sues for $25,000

Brooklyn, N. Y., May 29 (AP).—Suit of a sophomore against a college for $25,000 on the ground that two years on the campus were a "total loss" so far as he could see went to trial today before Supreme Court Justice Smith and a jury.

The plaintiff, Peter G. Wagner, of Brooklyn, named as defendants in his action Long Island University and its former dean, Dr. George R. Hardie.

"I entered the university believing that I could qualify there for a premedical education," Wagner testified. "After two years at the university I found that even if I completed the four-year course I still would be ineligible for admission to a medical college. I wasted two years."

He said former Dean Hardie assured him that if he completed the Long Island University course he would be eligible for medical work.

Leonardtown, Md., May 29 (Spl.). The Maj. William Thomas Chapter, D. A. R., of St. Marys County, June 9 will dedicate a tablet on an old oak tree on the Three Notch road near Hollywood.

This tree still bears three notches put there by Indians more than 300 years ago to mark the trail, later used by the colonists as a highway to the Northern colonies. It is now an improved State highway and a direct route to St. Marys City.

U.S. Denied Writ to Aid Labor Vote

Declares Norris Law Bars Course in Union Row.

Wilmington, Del., May 29 (AP).—The Government suffered a setback today in its attempt to enjoin the Weirton Steel Co. from taking part in the election of collective bargaining representatives by its employes.

Judge John P. Nields, in United States district court, held that "this court is without jurisdiction to issue a temporary injunction in such case unless the testimony of witnesses is heard in open court, with opportunity for cross-examination."

The decision was a denial of the Government's motion for a preliminary injunction against the Weirton company pending final determination of the issue.

Court Lacks Power.

Justice Nields upheld the defendant's contention that the litigation involved a labor dispute and that therefore, under the Norris-LaGuardia anti-injunction act, the court lacked power to issue a restraining order merely on the basis of ex parte affidavits.

The relative merits of fundamental issues were not decided by the court, and points involving a Constitutional challenge of the labor guarantee provisions of the National industrial recovery act and an attack upon the so-called company union, remain for determination when, and if, a final hearing is held.

"The somewhat extended consideration of the facts clearly suggest the law controlling the court in determining this motion for a preliminary injunction," the decision said.

Workers Held Divided.

"These facts picture a labor dispute. This dispute had existed since the Amalgamated Union lodges were organized at the defendant's plant. The employes have split into hostile camps. They are divided between loyalty to the Amadgamated Union and loyalty to the company union.

"A very recent act of Congress defines and limits the jurisdiction of this court in the issue of injunctions in labor disputes. * * *

"The act provides 'that no court of the United States as herein defined shall have jurisdiction to issue any restraining order of temporary or permanent injunction in a case involving or growing out of a labor dispute, except * * * after hearing the testimony of witnesses in open court (with opportunity for cross-examination) in support of the allegations of the complaint made under oath, and testimony, in opposi-

Kidnap Threats Send Cord Family On Long Cruise

New York, May 29 (AP).—The World-Telegram says E. L. Cord's yacht Virginia has sailed for England to pick up the wealthy motor and aviation magnate and his family for a long cruise as the result of kidnaping threats against his children.

Cord, says the newspaper, has been in England two months and his family has been guarded. Numerous threats have been received by Cord for the last year, says the newspaper, but he ignored them until the kidnaping of William F. Gettle, whose estate is not far from the Cords in Beverly Hills, Calif.

Cord took his two sons by a former marriage out of a boarding school and with his wife and their two young daughters came on to New York under heavy guard.

The yacht was described as having provisions for a year.

Capone Loses Plea For Habeas Corpus

Convicted Gangster Plans to Appeal Decision.

New Orleans, May 29 (AP).—Al "Scarface" Capone, who made gangsterism a symbol of the prohibition era, must continue to wear prison stripes in the Federal Penitentiary at Atlanta, Ga.

The Federal Circuit Court of Appeals here today denied a petition for a writ of habeas corpus, sought by the former beer baron. Capone's attorneys quickly announced an appeal would be taken to the United States Supreme Court.

Capone sought his release on the contention the offenses for which he was convicted were barred by the 3-year statute of limitations. He was convicted of evading the payment of a $140,585.76 income tax on an income of $670,021.02 for 1925, 1926 and 1927. He began serving a 10-year sentence in the Atlanta Pentitentiary on May 6, 1932.

The United States and Cuba yesterday signed a new treaty supplanting that of 1903. The Platt amendment which Cuba had contended against for years was eliminated, making Cuban independence virtually complete. Secretary of State Cordell Hull looks on while Cuban Ambassador Dr. Manuel Marquez Sterling signs.

By Kendall Foss.

The United States and Cuba signed a new treaty yesterday afternoon, abolishing the trouble-making provisions of the so-called Platt amendment, the 1903 treaty permanently regulating Cuban-American relations, and bestowing upon Cuba true independence and sovereignty for the first time in history.

Almost before the ink was dry the treaty was on its way to the

Morgenthau Suspends Five Others in Philadelphia Revenue Office.

Driving ahead in an effort to root out political money-raising activities among Federal office holders, Secretary of Treasury Morgenthau yesterday suspended Alvin F. Fix, collector of internal revenue at Philadelphia, pending investigation of charges. Five other employes in the same office also were suspended.

The suspension of Fix was with the direct approval of President Roosevelt.

Suspensions also were ordered in the National Park Service, though the nature of the charges was not indicated. Those involved were Elbert C. Maryland U.'s Terrapin Back From Kidnapers' Cruel Grasp

The University of Maryland's prodigal terrapin has returned—by order of Johns Hopkins University.

In all its dignity and majesty the 600-pound bronze effigy of "The Archbishop," university mascot, will reign again on its sandstone throne in front of Ritchie Coliseum during graduation.

Now the question will be, says the University of Maryland, who will pay the "considerable sum" necessary to repair the damage done by the terrapin-snatchers early yesterday.

"We're doing a lot of thinking but we're not saying anything," said Ralph Williams, freshman activities director, who has acted as special nurse to the terrapin model since its unveiling one year ago yesterday.

The model was pried from its base with a crowbar, found near the scene of the depredation. On the base were painted the letters "J. H. U." and "H," Williams said.

Inquiring in the neighborhood, Maryland students learned that a roadster bearing six collegiate youths stopped at a garage in Berwyn. One was said to have been suffering from a mashed hand. Garage attendants said three of the youths rode in the roadster and the other three on the running boards. There was something heavy in the rumble seat, they said.

Williams telephoned Henry Iddings, graduate manager of athletics at Johns Hopkins University. Iddings said he "would be on the lookout." He later called Williams and said the turtle was being returned, but refused to divulge where he had located it.

The original terrapin, whose effigy was stolen, was a native of Crisfield, Md., famous for its "terrapin soup" terrapins. The model was cast by Edwin C. Mayo, of Providence, R. I., a member of the class of 1903. The terrapin itself pulled the cord that unveiled its effigy.

Unions Ask NRA Order Be Rescinded, Seek Recognition.

Wagner Is Hopeful Of Averting Crisis

President Studies Code; Agreement Nears on Changes.

Grave threats of gigantic strikes in steel and textiles, two of the country's most important industries, hourly grew more ominous yesterday as Government officials already troubled over labor clashes in Toledo, San Francisco and Minneapolis, labored to soothe the wrath of the wage earner.

Senator Robert F. Wagner, chairman of the National Labor Board, was closeted for two hours with Mike F. Tighe, president of the Amalgamated Association of Iron, Steel and Tin Workers of America.

"I am very hopeful that the threatened steel strike won't materialize," Wagner declared after his talk with the florid-faced union leader, who repeatedly has warned his organization would call a "holiday" of 100,000 or more steel workers next month unless manufacturers recognized the union.

King Confers With McMahon.

Harry O. King, NRA division administrator, discussed the prospective textile flare-up with Thomas F. McMahon, president, and other officials of the United Textile Works of America. Unable to negotiate an agreement, King indicated Recovery Administrator Hugh S. Johnson would receive union leaders Friday.

McMahon predicted a Nation-wide strike by 300,000 men and women next Tuesday unless NRA rescinded an order for 25 per cent curtailment in the industry's production during the summer. He insisted labor should receive a compensating wage increase.

Meantime, President Roosevelt considered revision of the steel code at a White House conference with Donald Richberg, Wagner and representatives of the Federal Trade Commission. It was later announced the President would make known his decision today in time for the new agreement to become effective with expiration of the existng code tomorrow. An agreement seemed certain, but officials gave no inkling of what changes might be expected.

U. S. Denied Injunction.

The steel situation was further muddled by refusal of a Federal court in Wilmington, Del., to grant the Government a preliminary injunction against Weirton Steel Co., to force an employes' election demanded by union men.

The court ruled the Norris-LaGuardia antilabor injunction act made it impossible to issue such an order on the basis of affidavits alone.

There was a possibility that the Department of Justice would produce the complaining witnesses in person.

In some quarters it was believed the Wilmington decision would encourage other steel manufacturers to refuse to permit supervision of elections among its employes by the Labor Board—the same conduct

Six Men Are Accused In First Degree Murder

A charge of first degree murder was booked against Leonard Smith, colored, yesterday after the District grand jury had returned an indictment against him. Two other colored men, Clarence Eugene Ross and Andrew Jackson, and three white men, Earl Gray, Leo Warring and Charles Warring were charged with being accessories after the fact.

Nelson was slain in the 1400 block of P street northwest, police said. His body was placed in a truck and taken to a longely spot in Montgomery County, where it was dumped beside the road. Smith told police Nelson came to his apartment and threatened him with a gun. He claimed he shot in self-defense.

Cuba Gets Full Independence By New Treaty

Senate. Ratification, it was indicated, will follow without delay.

All other provisions of the Platt amendment, never-failing sources of fuel for Latin-American charges of "Yanqui" imperialism, were unceremoniously dropped overboard.

Surrenders Rights.

Gone is the right to intervene to maintain "independence" and a government capable of protecting life and property. Gone, too, is the right to supervise Cuba's making of foreign loans. And the right to prevent Cuba from permitting large-scale colonization or concluding treaties with foreign powers likely to impair her independence is also a thing of the past. These are the three provisions of the Platt amendment which have festered in Cuban minds for 31 years.

In short, the mooring lines, holding the S. S. Cuba fast to the American wharf, have been cast off and the United States merely reserves one cabin (Guantanamo) on future cruises in stormy international waters.

For form's sake, Cuba reaffirms her acceptance in 1903 of the validity of all acts of the United States during the Spanish-American War and the ensuing occupation and intervention. This merely rules out the possibility of claims, long ago consigned to the dust heap.

Article 5 of the Platt amendment, which permitted the United States to supervise sanitary regulations in the island, has been placed in the new treaty with an understanding that whenever anything looking like an epidemic develops in either country the other shall have the right to slap on a quarantine without this being considered an unfriendly act.

Treaty Signers.

Signature took place in Secretary Hull's office shortly before 4 p. m. Signers were the Secretary, Assistant Secretary Sumner Welles, formerly Ambassador to Cuba, and Cuban Ambassador Marquez Sterling. Present at the ceremony were the only two living men who witnessed the signature in Havana in 1903 of the original treaty: Sidney Smith of the department's treaty division, and John Barrett, one-time director of the Pan-American Union and minister to various Latin-American countries.

Others present included L. S. Rowe, present director of the Pan-American Union; Aurelio Portuondo, Cuban sugar king, and members of the department and Cuban Embassy staff.

Upon affixing his name Secretary Hull recalled that he had first visited Cuba in 1898 with his regiment and had never lost his interest in the affairs of the island republic.

"I think," he said, "that a new spirit was really born at the Montevideo Congress. We could very well call it the spirit of the 'Good Neighbor.' . . . In response to that spirit, the occasion for this treaty revision came about . . . I know I speak the whole-hearted sentiment of my Government and the people of this country when I say we shall be the same sympathetic neighbors we have been in the past, and we shall watch with great interest the progress of the people of Cuba."

Cuban Thugs Beat American

Rob Linotype Operator; Publisher's Secretary Told to Leave.

Havana, May 29 (U.P.).—A fresh wave of anti-Americanism broke out tonight when a band of Negro ruffians assaulted Latta Carly, and American linotype operator on the Havana Post.

They beat Carly, robbed him of his watch, and fled when his cries attracted police, who opened fire on the assailants. The attack followed recent violence against United States Ambassador Jefferson Caffery and indirect attacks against members of the embassy staff, warned to leave Cuba.

The attack on Carly was followed by a mysterious warning to the American secretary of the publisher of the newspaper, El Mundo, to leave the country. The secretary said a telephone call came from an unidentified person, threatening:

"You Americans better get out of Cuba in 30 days."

The incidents followed redoubling of guards about the United States Embassy and residence of Ambassador Caffery as the populace celebrated termination of the permanent treaty with Washington, designed to restore full sovereignty to the island republic.

the reparation negotiations took a turn upward toward moderation and good sense, the European landscape became uniformly black. Over the factories and farms which men had been working to restore the economic crisis now relentlessly spread its pall. The war had not yet been paid for. The Credit Anstalt failure in Vienna in May, 1931, was the final signal for the whole string of financial blocks to fall. Europe definitely abandoned its first chastened mood and its tentative effort at economic cooperation. It plunged into a period when every State sought simply to live from moment to moment, and by each convulsive struggle to protect its trade and currency, provoked retaliatory measures from its neighbors and drew the noose tightly about its own neck. Political kept pace with economic disintegration. Lausanne came too late. What would have saved Bruening only whetted Von Schleicher's appetite; and it was Hitler, at last, who ate the full meal.

Prophets Fall, One by One.

As their misery increased, people everywhere began to doubt their experts, their wise men. The call was for a deus ex machina. Was there no superman able to arrange that millions should not go workless and starve in a world where vast resources still lay unexploited? They did not stop to argue whether any man's action could replace the relentless operation of economic forces; whether any one could predict in their infinite detail the human reactions to a given set of circumstances. They saw that laissez faire had failed to give them bread and work. They demanded that the Government, which in war-time had assumed jurisdiction in every department of life, now look after them in times which many of them found just as hard.

Here was the chance for anyone with a ready-made economic panacea, and for anyone who was not restrained by knowledge or candor from promising to solve every political and international question provided only he could shake off the stupid harness of democracy.

The two appeals went hand in hand, one strengthening the other. Thus in Germany two human desires which had been consistently thwarted by the economic hardships of defeat and inflation—the "will to work" and the "will to be happy"—were nourished simultaneously by the Hitler political gospel we now know so well—the "will to believe," the "will to be strong," the "will to follow," the "will to be honored." And today all the embryo fascist movements in Europe ("Iron Guards" in Rumania, "National radicals" in Czechoslovakia, "Solidarite Francaise" and "Croix de Feu" in France, "Mosleyites" in England) base their appeal on two main slogans. One is "Clean up politics; make government efficient; break the strangle hold of interest; find work for all." The other is "End international humbug; save national rights sacrificed by the old-line politicians."

Two great groups in particular have responded to these slogans: The war generation, who had never been able to settle down to jobs and who felt that the fruits of their sacrifice were being frayed or frittered away, and the youths still coming out of school into a disorganized and workless world. The appeal was particularly effective in the case of the middle class. These, despite their post-war monetary and economic disasters, were still, to some extent, a propertied class; hence they favored a development, which would save a position threatened on the one hand by Communism and on the other by plutocracy, and being politically minded they acted quickly and vigorously.

Struggle of Losers Gets Under Way.

Germany's almost mystical acceptance of Hitler and the Fuhrerprinzip carried the stream of European events into still another phase. Now not merely were cooperative attempts to secure economic recovery abandoned in favor of each state's endeavor to keep afloat by pushing its neighbors down—what Spengler calls the "struggle on the keel of the overturned boat." Now all nations began to see that the social degradation and increased nationalistic feeling produced by the economic struggle was in danger of leading to direct physical encounters, that is to say, to war. And they saw that the danger was magnified by the militaristic character of the new authorization regimes.

War there really has been even in Europe, though it has not been called that. War in disguise was waged by Nazi Germany against Austria all through the summer and fall of 1933 and into the early days of March, 1934. It was the same sort of undeclared war, defying definitions of aggressor and skirting around provisions of peace pacts, which had baffled jurists and statesmen in Manchuria a year earlier. Japan sent armies and warships to "police" Manchuria and "temporarily" to protect Japanese interests there. Berlin used the radio, money, secret agents, smuggled arms and every sort of threat and cajolery to undermine the existing Austrian regime and force Austria into union with the Third Reich. In each case the things done were described as measures short of war. But in the aggregate they amounted to war. If China and Austria had been the military equals of Japan and Germany, they would certainly have called it war and would have retaliated in kind * * *.

Germany Building Mental War Machine.

Europe's realization that this critical phase had arrived turned the conference for the reduction of armaments into a conference to delay or limit German rearmament. The maneuvers of militarists now supersedes the maneuver of statesmen. The conference has not been able to attain even its new and modified objectives, nor, naturally, has it succeeded in diminishing the fear of war or the eventual danger of it. A new armaments race has begun—or, reverting to the early theory of Gen. Bliss, the old armaments race has been resumed after a truce of exhaustion. Europe knows that whatever the military machine which Germany may "legally" construct, and entirely apart from whatever armaments she secretly acquires, she is already building up in the mind and heart of every young German a belief in war as the only way to wipe clean the German shield of the disgrace of Versailles and regain the Fatherland's lost inheritance.

War might be soon or late. It might be soon, if the more radical Nazi chieftains get control and hazard everything on some sudden success abroad either in order to distract attention from economic troubles piling up at home or simply because their lack of psychological equipment blinds them to the risk. It might be soon, too, in the event that Germany's neighbors are tempted into dealing with her now while they can, instead of waiting for her to deal with them when she can. It might be postponed until the new generation of German youth—brash and idealistic and stuffed with lies—have been matured and hardened to face an ordeal. When that time arrives, it is hard to imagine those who quietly cherish the Potsdam tradition holding back from an effort to vindicate the old imperial army's methods and to achieve at last the old empire's aims. Then again, provided foreign opposition does not quietly collapse, there would be war.

Alternatively, do we see any likelihood that a group of the nations which cling to a belief in orderly processes will make up their minds to sacrifice some part of their freedom of individual action in order to act together to suppress all wars, "aggressive," "preventive," or "unofficial?" Will they find a new way to implement that new collective will? Or will they improve and then really use the instruments already in existence? To secure time for this recruitment of forces, as well as to save their essential institutions, they would meanwhile have to make rapid progress with the renovation of their own political systems. They would have to nullify the autocrat's appeal by achieving the increased governmental efficiency which he promises, but at less expense. They would have to make economic freedom as much the goal of democracy as political freedom has traditionally been.

This is not the place to discuss the immense difficulty of establishing any system of collective security, or to outline a program of dynamic democracy. But those still seem the only antidotes to war and dictatorship.

(Mr. Armstrong's second article on Germany and the world will appear tomorrow.)

2 on Arlington County Board Are Removed

Jones and Garnett Held Appointed Illegally, and Replaced.

Smith, Arlington County real estate man, was appointed by Judge McCarthy on June 1, 1933, to succeed Gall, and he appointed Garnett, former attorney general of Virginia and former chairman of sion, to succeed Gosnell, December 9, 1933.

In declaring their selection had been made illegally, Chairman Kelley did not explain why such a long time had elapsed before the point was made. The chairman declared authority to fill vacancies rested solely with the board and he offered in support of his contention an opinion he had obtained from Attorney General Abram P. Staples.

On resolution of Harry A. Fellows, unanimously adopted, the seats were declared vacant and Edmund D. Campbell, of East Falls Church, chairman of the semiofficial public utilities commission and a Washington attorney, and Joseph C. May, of Cherrydale, were elected in their places.

Accompanied by Chairman Kelley, the two newly appointed members went to the office of County Clerk John A. Petty to be sworn in. To their surprise he refused to give the oath in the absence of Judge McCarthy. The trio returned to the board room, where Kelley sworn in the members himself. The board adopted resolutions approving the issuance of the $2,500,000 sewer bond issue.

Bids were received and opened for the collection of refuse for the year beginning July 1. Chairman Kelley announced that the award would be made at the next meeting.

Fix Ousted in U. S. Slush Fund Quiz

Demaray, acting director of the National Park Service. David Canfield, chief ranger, was made acting superintendent.

Further Inquiry Planned.

Those suspended in the Philadelphia office along with Collector Fix were P. J. Reilly, chief of the income tax division; Henry L. Haines, chief field deputy; John J. Gegan, cashier; Robert M. Black, chief of the narcotic division, and William E. Brown, assistant collector.

They were suspended pending further investigation by the Civil Service Commission. Charges, according to Secretary Morgenthau, involved solicitation of political funds on Federal premises. The Secretary conferred with the suspended officials yesterday and said afterwards that he was so impressed with the nature of the charges that he decided to act immediately.

Abbott Resignation Recalled.

Only a few days ago Horatio Abbott, Michigan Democratic National committeeman, resigned as internal revenue collector and two of his associates were suspended following charges that political funds had been solicited by some of the group.

It was learned that investigations are going on in several other parts of the country with the possibility that more shakeups are to follow.

The Philadelphia action is expected to have political repercussions in Pennsylvania. Some of the men involved were said to have been appointed on recommendation of Joseph F. Guffey, Democratic Senatorial candidate and arbiter for Federal patronage in Pennsylvania.

Evergold Stretch Duel Victor at Wash. Park

Washington Park Race Track, Ill., May 29 (AP).—Evergold, from the Shandon Farms, and cleverly ridden by Jockey A. Richard, won the top race at Washington Park today in a spectacular stretch run with Joseph E. Widener's Chance Line. A. B. Letellier's Sazerac finished third in the 6-furlong sprint.

Evergold, one of the longest striding horses on the American turf, was next to last in a field of five near the back stretch, but closed with an undeniable rush to win the purse by a neck. He ran the distance in 1:12 2-5, paying $7.56 in the mutuels.

Danville Lists Donkey Games This Week-end

Danville, Va., May 29 (Spl.). Three games of donkey baseball will be played here on Friday, Saturday and Sunday. Trained donkeys will be brought here and the service clubs will be matched.

W. M. Kemper, president of the New Deal Club, has challenged councilmanic candidates on the other side for a game, but Jesse W. Benton, manager of the rival group, has not answered.

The donkeys are trained to stop suddenly. The players ride them in pursuing the baseball.

Richest Indian Dies as Suits Haunt Fortune

Barnett never was more than a simple Indian, and he preferred life in a simple way. To his neighbors he appeared practically simple-minded. His conversations were chiefly grunts.

Threads of Litigation.

The threads of the Creek's affairs wandered in and out of the office of the Secretary of the Interior, from State to State, unreeling a series of events, each more fantastic than the previous.

His death left uncompleted two of the major suits that marked his trail, one involving Representative Harold C. McGugin, of Kansas, and another involving his "widow"—the woman whose marriage to Barnett was characterized by the United States Supreme Court as a "kidnaping" of a suddenly rich Indian by an "adventuress."

Jackson Barnett was a full-blood Creek. When the Indian land was divided among the tribe members, Barnett received 160 acres as his share of the domain of his red forebears. In 1912, he was adjudged mentally incompetent, and the Probate Court of the county appointed a guardian. About the same time oil was found on his land.

Barnett's guardian executed a lease of the oil rights, and large royalties poured in.

Anna Laura Lowe, reading about Barnett in an oil journal, visited him at his home near Henryetta, Okla., where the Indian lived with a Negro and his wife. Refused a marriage license in Oklahoma, Mrs. Lowe traveled to Kansas with Barnett and a civil ceremony was performed by a Justice of the Peace at Independence.

Marriage Repeated.

At Coffeyville, Kans., an attorney named Harold C. McGugin, now Representative from Kansas, entered the case. It was the finding of the Southern California District Court that Mrs. Lowe, after taking legal advice from McGugin, crossed the line into Missouri and the marriage was performed a second time.

Notwithstanding the marriage, Barnett's money remained in keeping of the Secretary of the Interior. It was not long before the Secretary began to hear from Mrs. Barnett with requests for funds, despite an allowance of $2,500 a month. Barnett could neither read nor write, and records of his case at the Department of the Interior yesterday noted that "a new industry started up in Oklahoma, i. e., that of obtaining subscription pledges from Barnett, signed by his thumb-mark.

It was under those circumstances that in December, 1922, Charles H. Burke, commissioner of Indian affairs, received for his approval, a paper signed with Barnett's thumb-mark. The paper requested the distribution of $1,100,000 of Liberty bonds held in his name. The request was granted by Albert B. Fall, then Secretary of the Interior, and February 1, 1923 the bonds were passed out in accordance with the terms of the request, $550,000 going to the American Baptist Home Mission Society of New York for the benefit of institutions in Oklahoma on condition the society pay to Barnett $20,000 annually for the duration of his life. The other $550,000 went to Mrs. Barnett.

In addition, funds in the amount of $200,000 were deposited in the Riggs National Bank, the income to go to Barnett and the principal to Mrs. Barnett on his death.

Suit filed by the Government in Los Angeles held that Barrett was a mental incompetent, that his transfer of $550,000 in bonds to Mrs. Lowe was therefore void, that the Interior Secretary had no right to approved the transaction, and that no legal marriage existed between Barnett and Mrs. Lowe. The court ruled in favor of the Government on all the points.

Other suits followed. One was filed in the District Supreme Court to recover for the Government $200,000 deposited in the Riggs Bank. Another was filed in the United States District Court in Kansas, seeking to recover $135,000 of the $150,000 in bonds that went to McGugin as Mrs. Lowe's attorney, and a third was filed in Oklahoma, to recover $15,000 paid to an attorney, Marshall L. Mott, by McGugin or Mrs. Lowe. Bonds turned over the Baptist Society were recovered.

The death of Barnett yesterday left the District suit pending, and trial of the other two will not be started until the District case is settled.

Ickes Awaits Decisions.

Final outcome of the suits is awaited with interest by Secretary of the Interior Ickes, who in his year of office has many times heard demands from Mrs. Lowe. Typical of these were requests for $15,000 to s"ee the World's Fair," $10,000 for summer vacations and the like. Last Christmas she visited the department personally with a request for $10,000 for Christmas shopping.

Informal opinions at the Interior Department yesterday held Mrs. Lowe would not inherit Barnett's trust funds, but that they would go to his Indian relatives.

superintendent of the Police Bureau of Identification.

Cox said he would have the State Bureau of Identification study the fingerprints on the jug before announcing definitely they were Miss Johnson's.

Three young men acquaintances of the girl were questioned by police, but were released.

In his statement, the father said: "Virginia must not die in vain. Her fiendish murder is a challenge to the security of the home and the safety of our children."

Wrote Suicide Note.

Evidence adduced from the family indicated the girl recently had suffered a nervous breakdown. Mrs. Claire Fitzgerald, her sister, said the girl had been highly nervous for two days and had called a physician who gave her medicine early yesterday without the knowledge of her parents. She added that she saw her sister write a suicide note shortly before she disappeared from her home.

Mrs. Fitzgerald said she grabbed the half-written note from beneath her sister's hand and threw it away "so that members of the family would not see it."

Dr. C. D. McDonnell, autopsy surgeon, said a study of the mouth, nose and lungs indicated that Virginia lay on her right side, breathing in the flames from her kerosene-soaked clothing. He declined to express an opinion as to whether it was murder or suicide.

Miami's May 29 Heat Lowest in 23 Years

Miami, Fla., May 29 (AP).—The lowest temperature recorded here on May 29 in 23 years—67 degrees—was reported by the Weather Bureau.

Richard W. Gray, meteorologist, said that blankets, pulled out of the closet last night, could be kept close at hand tonight. He predicted a minimum temperature as low or lower than that recorded last night.

He said the low temperature was due to a storm that swept up the coast and lashed the Carolinas, and said normal June mercury readings should return after tomorrow.

Another Trip By Roosevelt Starts Today

President Will Make Visit to New England and Metropolis.

For the second time this year, President Roosevelt will leave Congress in session today to begin a several days' swing into New York and New England, returning to the Capital next Monday.

Entraining shortly after noon, the President will go to Gettysburg for an address late today, to New York for a review of the fleet tomorrow, and on to Groton, Mass., to see his youngest song, John, graduate the next day.

On board the special train the President will write his war debts message to Congress, sending it back to the White House for transmission, which probably will come on Friday.

At Gettysburg late this afternoon, the President will make a short address on a Memorial Day program. He will be presented to an audience on the Civil War battlefield by Gov. Gifford Pinchot, of Pennsylvania.

Reviews Fleet Tomorrow.

Preceeding on to New York tonight, the President will stop as his town home on Sixty-fifth street and tomorrow will board the heavy cruiser Indianapolis, to review the United States Fleet of 88 vessels as it sweeps past Ambrose lightship.

With him on the flagship of the scouting fleet will be Secretary of the Navy Claude A. Swanson; Josephus Daniels, Ambassador to Mexico, who was the President's "old chief" as wartime Secretary of the Navy; several other members of the Cabinet, and other guests of the President.

Another cruiser, the Louisville, also is now in New York Harbor to pick up Assistant Secretary of the Navy Henry L. Roosevelt and other guests, many of whom will go from Washington tomorrow to see the first Presidential review of the fleet since 1919—the greatest naval spectacle ever afforded New York.

The Presidential party will occupy a forward gun platform on the Indianapolis during the exercises, which are expected to attract thousands of spectators in pleasure boats. Ambrose Lightship is only a few miles off Coney Island.

To Go to Groton by Car.

After the review the President will return to his home and then that night will entrain for Worcester, Mass. The next day he will go by automobile to Groton for the graduation exercises, and again on Saturday he will visit his old alma mater to make an address on its fiftieth anniversary.

Returning to New York, the President will proceed up the Hudson to his Hyde Park home, where he will spend Sunday with his mother. That night he plans to entrain once more for the return to the Capital, which he will reach the next morning.

Originally, Mr. Roosevelt had counted on several days at Hyde Park, but this visit was cut short yesterday on word from Capitol Hill that setniment is uniting on an adjournment next week. The President wishes to help Congress wind up this session.

The President's last message to Congress, which will deal with a National watershed and conservation program, is expected to be finished for transmission next Monday. Neither this message nor the communication on war debts will ask legislation.

Virginia Knights Meet in Richmond

Catholics Hear Dr. Ryan at Convention.

Richmond, May 29 (Spl.).—Delegates are in Richmond for the sessions of the thirty-fourth annual convention of the Virginia State Council, Knights of Columbus, which opened today when an address of welcome was made by Mayor J. Fulmer Bright. Sessions are scheduled tomorrow.

A religious feature of the convention was the mass celebrated at 9 a. m. by the Rev. Edward L. Stephens, State chaplain, in St. Peter's Church, attended by delegates. The sermon was preached by the Right Rev. Msgr. Felix F. Kaup, vicar-general of the Diocease of Richmond.

Speakers tonight included the Rev. Michael P. Raady, assistant general secretary of the National Catholic Welfare Conference; D. J. Calahan, supreme treasurer of the Knights of Columbus, and the Right Rev. John A. Ryan, D. D., of the Catholic University at Washington.

10,000 Children Attend Hagerstown Track Meet

Hagerstown, Md., May 29 (Spl.).—Ten thousand school children, their teachers and parents flocked to the city park here today, for the twentieth annual track and field championship meet of Washington County public schools.

Various games were staged under the direction of the State Playground Athletic League officials, headed by Director William Burdick.

Mrs. Emma Thomasson Buried in Gordonsville

Gordonsville, Va., May 29 (Spl.).—Mrs. Emma May Thomasson, 73, widow of Charles S. Thomasson, died early yesterday at a hospital in Richmond from pneumonia.

Funeral services were held this afternoon here at the home of her son, W. W. Thomasson. Interment was in the family plot in Maplewood Cemetery.

She is survived by five children: W. W. Thomasson, Gordonsville; Mrs. Cecil Elam, Trevilians; Mrs. A. M. Biscoe, St. Just; Charles H. Thomasson, Richmond and Mrs. James Allen, Kinsale.

Traveling Terrapin Returns

Dr. Raymond A. Pearson, president of the University of Maryland, and Ralph Williams, freshman activities director, are shown as they shook hands last year at the unveiling of the school's ill-fated bronze terrapin, which was stolen yesterday and later returned, allegedly by Johns Hopkins University students. The university mascot, from which the 600-pound model was made, is shown in the foreground. Williams at this time was president of the student body.

Davis, speaking first, expressed the hope that Germany would return to the conference and urged the delegates to go back to the British convention draft of last June, which accepted all nations as the basis of a future convention. That draft proposed an army of 200,000 for Germany.

The French and British views on this and other phases of the conference will be expressed tomorrow by Louis Barthou, French foreign minister, and Sir John Simon, foreign secretary of Great Britain.

"Reduced to its simplest terms, there are two ways, and only two ways," Davis said, "to achieve security.

"The first is by overwhelming superiority of armament, coupled perhaps with reinsurance in the form of alliances, but this system has led first to a race in armaments and then to a war, from which we have not yet recovered and from a repetition of which we might never recover. * * *

"The other way is to increase the power of defense and decrease the power of attack—in other words, to reduce the chances of a successful campaign of aggression—by a progressive abolition of those types of weapons peculiarly suitable for invasion, namely, heavy mobile artillery, tanks and bombing planes. * * *

"The American Government earnestly and sincerely believes that only by following the second path—that of disarmament—can the peace and progress of the world and the national security of each country be truly promoted. * * *

"The United States has repeatedly stated in unequivocal terms its belief in the value and efficacy of a drastic reduction of armaments and its willingness to join with other powers in bringing armaments down to a level to be determined by the needs of actual defense."

Litvinoff, in suggesting that the conference be made into a permanent instrument of peace, declared that there now exists danger of war, "or rather a series of wars which include all continents and humanity." The conference, he said, should concentrate on the establishment of additional guarantees of peace.

Arthur Henderson, president of the conference, in opening the session, reminded the delegates that the situation is critical, declaring that agrements on air and land armaments and on control of war material manufacture are the most important problems involved in disarmament discussions.

Virginia Pension Rates Announced

Confederate Payments Are Increased This Year.

Richmond, May 29 (Spl.).—John H. Johnson, chief pension clerk in the office of the State Comptroller, today outlined the amounts which Confederate pensioners will receive under the new appropriation act. In many instances there is a substantial increase over last year, when reductions were in effect. The rates follow:

To soldiers, sailors and marines totally blind, $540.
To soldiers, sailors and marines totally deaf, $540.
To those Confederate veterans who are eligible to a pension and who are totally disabled, $360.
To every widow of a Confederate soldier, sailor or marine, eligible to a pension, who has become totally blind, $240.
To every such widow not totally blind who was married prior to October 1, 1880, $120.
To every such widow not totally blind who was married on or after October 1, 1880, and before January 1, 1921, $100.
To every matron, eligible to a pension, who served in a Confederate hospital, $120.
To the estate of a deceased pensioner for funeral expenses, after July next, $45.
To Confederate servants, $84.

Mrs. Mary Brown, 56, Dies in Charles Town

Charles Town, W. Va., May 29 (Spl.).—Mary Elizabeth Brown, 56, died yesterday at her home here from heart trouble.

She is survived by her husband, Orin H. Brown, and three daughters. The funeral will be held from the home and interment will be in Payne Chapel.

which inspired court action against Weirton.

Connery Fights for Bill.

While McMahon was informing officials that "we mean business," Representative William P. Connery (Democrat), Massachusetts, on the House floor advocated the adoption of his 30-hour-week measure as a permanent preventative against labor unrest.

The textile leader, however, blamed the attempt to cut hours without raising wages as the cause of most of the trouble. "It may prove to be the straw that broke the camel's back," he added.

"You have seen Toledo, Minneapolis, San Francisco," Connery said, "but labor leaders tell me these disorders will be nothing compared with what will happen if Congress does not pass labor legislation."

Frey Sees Danger.

One of Tighe's companions, John P. Frey, chief of the metal trades department, American Federation of Labor, was among those who emphasized potential danger in the general labor situation.

"I am convinced," he declared, "that there is greater and more widespread ill feeling toward employers today on the part of labor, organized and unorganized, than ever before in this country."

The union steel workers were smarting under their inability to make a dent in the industry's announced policy to deal with their men through company unions and to oppose independent unions.

Genteel Lady Captures Detroit Race Feature

Detroit, May 29 (AP).—Genteel Lady, of Charles T. Fisher's Dixiana Stable, furnished the thrill for a crowd of about 6,000 at the Michigan State Fair Grounds track today with a nose victory over Inflate in the 6-furlong fourth race.

The race carried a purse of only $800, but it represented the Dixiana Stable's first purse of the Detroit meeting.

Le Bruyere set the pace in the early stages. Inflate soon moved up along the outside, however, to get in front. In the stretch, Genteel Lady swung around the rest of the field and caught Inflate on almost the last step. Genteel Lady paid $14.40 for a $2 ticket.

The daily double paid $300.40, Jockey Landlot taking both ends of it on Double B and Our Count.

Hartman Named Coach At Harrisville School

Harrisville, W. Va., May 29 (Spl.).—Appointment of George K. Hartman, lately coach of athletics at the Mannington High School, as head coach of athletics at the Harrisville High School is announced by the Ritchie County School Board. He succeeds Zygmund Sobak, who is giving up coaching and who has been appointed a member of the faculty as an instructor.

Hartman was star trackman at Ohio Northern University, where he holds the track record for the 440-yard dash, and attended Ohio University and Broaddus College, where he was student-coach.

West Va. Trapshooting Scheduled Next Month

Charleston, W. Va., May 29 (Spl.).—Announcement is made by E. H. Wolfe, secretary of the Charleston Gun Club, that the annual West Virginia trapshooting championship matches will be held June 26-29, on the grounds of the local club.

Competitions will be held in handicap, doubles and 16-yard singles events for the State crowns, and approximately 100 of the best shooters in the State will participate. The local club is now installed in permanent new quarters with a fine clubhouse and modern equipment.

Virginia Permit Asked For Animal Cemetery

Richmond, May 29 (AP).—The State Corporation Commission today had before it an application of the Pet Memorial Park, Inc., for a charter to operate a mausoleum, a cemetery and a burial place for animals.

tion thereto, if offered and except after finding all facts by the court' * * *

Points to Law.

"It is contended that the act is not applicable to a suit wherein the United States is complainant. The act deals with labor disputes. It is immaterial who the complainant may be if a labor dispute is involved and the defendant was guilty guilty of acts of coercion and intimidation against employes when they were exercising or seeking to exercise their right of electing representatives for the purpose of collective bargaining.

"The defendant, therefore, was a party to a labor dispute. By reason of such acts the bill prays for relief against the defendant.

"As this is a case involving or growing out of a 'labor dispute and defendant is a party' to that dispute against whom relief is sought, this court is without jurisdiction to issue a temporary injunction in such case unless the testimony of witnesses is heard in open court with opportunity for cross-examination."

Disputed Issue.

Judge Nields said the case "obviously is controlled by the rule repeatedly announced in this District and circuit, that a preliminary injunction is never granted where the pleadings and affidavits disclose that the plaintiff's contentions in fact and in law are seriously disputed. * * *

"The case illustrates perfectly the propriety of the procedure prescribed by Congress and the futility of considering a motion for a preliminary injunctions in cases of this kind upon ex parte affidavits. Not only is there conflict of material facts but there are serious and intricate questions of law involved, particularly the question as to the Constitutionality of the National recovery act.

"Counsel in their brief have given extensive and careful consideration to this Constitutional question. Issues of the gravest importance are raised and should be determined only after a final hearing."

Election Plan Blocked.

The decision blocks the plan to hold an election immediately, under supervision of the National labor board, at the Weirion plants in Weirton and Clarksburg, W. Va., and Steubenville, Ohio. They employ about 13,000 men. Argument on the motion started last April 30, and consumed five days.

Government attorneys contended the election at the Weirton plants last December was attinded by coercion and intimidation on the part of the management to assure the election of representatives favoriable to company policies.

Reviewing these arguments, to show that the issue involved a "labor dispute" withi nthe meaning of the Norris-LaGuardia anti-injunction statute, the court said:

"Representatives of the amalgamated union claim the election was the result of intimidation and coercion on the part of the defendant. It is true that the company took an active part in advising its employes to vote for the nominees of the company union during the period from the settlement of the strike in October to the December elections.

Active Campaigning.

"There was active campaigning. The amalgamated union was agitating the election of certain persons and the company union was advocating others. The president of the company appeared at a number of meetings, as did other officers and foremen of the company. Such meetings were held nearly every night for three weeks prior to the election.

"The defendant, therefore, was a party to a labor dispute."

E. T. Weir, chairman of the steel company's board, said he was pleased to learn of the court's action. Stating he preferred to wait until he has seen the decision before commenting, Weir said, nevertheless:

"I understand, however, that the decision justifies our position on the facts in our controversy with the National Labor Board. Needless to say, I am pleased."

Senator Robert F. Wagner, of New York, chairman of the National Labor Board, said he understood "the merits of the case were not determined by the judge and that his decision was based entirely on the Norris anti-injunction law."

Last of Downing Bridge Bonds Are Redeemed

Heathsville, Va., May 29 (AP).—The supervisors of Northumberland County today were full title holders to the Downing Bridge over the Rappahannock at Tappahannock. Yesterday the last of the bonds issued for the construction of the bridge were handed back to the Bank of Northumberland at Heathsville.

In December $9,000 of these bonds, held by the Central Hanover Bank & Trust Co. of New York, were redeemed.

Japan's Hero Dead

ADMIRAL TOGO, hero of the sea battle 29 years ago which paved the way for Japan's victory in the Russo-Japanese War, died yesterday at the age of 87.

Admiral Togo, Japan's Naval Hero, Is Dead

Tokyo, May 30 (U.P.).—Fleet Admiral Count Heihachiro Togo, 87, Japan's greatest naval hero, died today.

He had been ill of cancer of the throat since last summer. Complications, including bladder stones, hastened the end.

Emperor Hirihito was described as "prostrate with grief" at the news.

Togo's case was pronounced hopeless May 27, the twenty-ninth anniversary of his great victory over the Russian Baltic fleet in the famous battle of Tsushima Straits—a victory which opened the way for Japan's march to foremost position among world powers.

Familyat Bedside.

Physicians had kept him alive for more than 48 hours by means of injections.

The admiral's widow, Setsuko, his son, and other members of the family were at his bedside when he expired.

Ashes of the commander will be interred in a special shrine after the hero has been canonized in the Shinto faith.

Togo's last thoughts were of his emperor and his last word of advice to the navy—which he had done so much to build—was to remain "true to the imperial tradition."

The cabinet will decide details of the funeral which probably will be the most elaborate since that of Emperor Taisho, who died Christmas Day, 1926.

A period of court and national mourning probably will be announced by the emperor.

Sprang From Naval Clan.

Togo was born in February, 1847, in Kogoshima Prefecture, Island of Kyushu, a member of the Satsuma Clan, from which practically all Japan's naval officers in the period of the restoration were drawn.

He was sent to England for study in 1871 and served with the British navy. He commanded the cruiser Naniwa during the Sino-Japanese war and on that vessel established the reputation which caused Emperor Mutsuhito to select him for command of the combined fleet assembled to meet the Russian Baltic squadron in the Russo-Japanese war of 1905.

Togo's victory was the high spot of his career. He sank 38 of the 40 chief Russian ships, established Japan as a sea power and made possible the subsequent great land operations in Manchuria.

Price Cutting Charged In Virginia Coal Areas

Richmond, May 29 (Spl.).—Complaints of alleged price cutting in the Bristol and Bluefield areas will be given a hearing on June 11 at Wytheville by the Virginia Retail Coal Authority, it was stated today by John Wright, the secretary.

The chief complaint is in regard to truckers who go to the mines and get coal and then sell at prices which regular dealers can not meet.

Garage Owner Is Hurt As Bus Wrecks Building

Farmville, Va., May 29 (AP).—Physicians at Southside Hospital here said that Chapman Lewis Spurlock, Meherrin garage owner, was not seriously injured in a freak accident today.

With Claude Womack, Spurlock was in the garage when a Danville-Richmond passenger bus left the highway and plowed through the building. None of the 23 bus passengers were reported hurt, but Spurlock received multiple bruises. Womack's hip was bruised.

Rev. McPherson Leaves Danville.

Danville, Va., May 29 (Spl.).—The Rev. Lowell McPherson, who for three months had been pastor of the West End Christian Church, has gone to his home in New York to spend three months and will be succeeded here by the Rev. Allen Stanger, a Yale student, who will hold services until the end of September.

cereal had soared above the dollar mark since last July.

Marts were flooded by news of deteriorated produce. North Dakotans described conditions in their State as unparalleled.

A three-day period devoted to prayers for relief began at Fergus Falls, Minn., and other communities in that State.

The Weather Bureau reported little rain in prospect, except in eastern Indiana and lower Michigan.

Washington, Maryland and Virginia so far have escaped the drought. Rainfall here this month totaled 3.58 inches, within a fraction of normal.

Subsoil Has No Moisture.

Kincer declared that total precipitation in most of the Ohio Valley and the Northwest since May 1 has been only about a fourth of normal. He explained the condition was aggravated in some States by the fact that subsoil contained virtually no moisture due to rainfall deficiences for several years. The deficiency in Minnesota since 1920 is 36.17 inches.

"Then, you must remember," he pointed out, "that even in good years many of the States in the Northwest have an average of only 20 inches of rain a year. Alabama, for example, normally averages 50 inches. If Alabama gets only half of normal it still has 25 inches, but thatisn't true of the States hardest hit by the present drought."

He stressed a deficiency throughout the Ohio Valley in every month since last Oceober. He said any drought is hard to break, since it has a tendency to perpetuate itself because very little moisture goes into the air to be condensed into rain.

Midwest Seen as Sahara.

Kincer pictured conditions as most critical in Wisconsin, Minnesota, North and South Dakota, Eastern Motnana and Nebraska. The drought also has spread to western New York, Maine, New Hampshire, Vermont, Ohio, eastern Kentucky, Indiana, Illinois, Michigan, Wisconsin, Iowa, Missouri, Western Kansas, New Mexico, Colorado, Wyoming, Utah, oSutheastern Idaho, Eastern Oregon, Southern California and Arizona.

E. A. Sherman, associate chief of the oFrestry Service, told the United Press millions of fertile acres were threatened.

"Nnlike something is done, and done quickly," he declared, "history is going to repeat itself and in a few more generations the western plains will be as arid as the Arabian desert, or the Sahara."

Sallie Gray Wins Latonia Feature

Is Victorious by 4 Lengths; Returns $12.60.

Latonia Race Track, Latonia, Ky., May 29 (AP).—For the second time in as many days, the colors of William E. Smith, member of the Kentucky State Racing Commission, were carried to victory in a Latonia feature as Sallie Gray captured the Glenoe Purse this afternoon.

Coming from behind after a rather slow beginning, the daughter of Wise Counselor overtook the leaders to win by four lengths under stout restraint. Mose Goldblatt's Gilbert Elston, the favorite, was second and R. T. Runnels' Star Bud, third.

Sallie Gray paid $12.60 for a $2 ticket. She covered the 6 furlongs of the claiming dash in 1:13 1-5.

OF ELKS TOUR ECONOMY
1 Gallon Quaker State = 4 quarts out Lubrication
1 Gallon ordinary oil = 3 quarts out Lubrication + 1 Quart waste
1 extra quart of lubrication in every gallon of Quaker State
Elks, individually and collectively, are noted for their generosity. But Elks, also, are canny business men. That's why, for six consecutive years, the cars in the Elks National Tour have been protected with Quaker State Motor Oil and Superfine Greases.
300,000 miles of the hardest kind of driving, but always keeping to schedule. Not a single delay due to lubrication failure. A long-run economy record made possible by that "extra quart of lubrication in every gallon of Quaker State"!
Ordinary motor oils contain one quart, more or less, of thin, watery liquid per gallon. This vaporizes quickly, burns up, fails to lubricate.

Leesburg High Seniors Hear Patrick Hurley

Advises Graduates Keep Open Mind in Meeting New Problems.

Leesburg, Va., May 29 (Spl.).—Appealing to the graduates of the Leesburg High School to use intelligence, minds open to suggestion, disinterested purpose and a clear realization of realities in adjusting themselves to the new times, former Secretary of War Patrick J. Hurley addressed the graduating class at commencement exercises here this evening.

Hurley told the graduates that whereas the material world is ever changing, moral qualities remain unchanged.

Declaring service is the only factor making for happiness, he advised his listeners to "be tolerant of the opinion of others, but, after having heard and considered these, have the strength of character to decide for yourself."

The speaker was introduced by Wilbur C. Hall, delegate from Loudoun County in the General Assembly. Music by Anton Kaspar, Washington violinist, interspersed the program.

Charles S. Monroe, principal, presented diplomas to the following: Ethel Littlejohn, Nancy Bradfield, Roberta Caviness, Mary Beales, Lena French, Helen Corbell, Dorothy Thayer, Mary Eileen Huffer, Willa Rose Huffer, Catherine Miller, Marguerite Plaster, John Kincaid, Moncure Lyon and Marion Oliver.

Rotary Club prizes were presented to Ethel Littlejohn, high school scholarship, $10; Thomas Franklin, high school general excellence, $20; grade general excellence, $5 each—seventh grade, Alice Bushong; sixth grade, Marjorie Yellott; fifth grade, Evelyn Culbertson; fourth grade, Mary Brooke Popkins; third grade, Jane Moriarity; second grade, Mary Wynkoop, and first grade, Nettie Mae James.

Undertaker Upheld In Suit Over Body

Charleston, W. Va., May 29 (Spl.).—In a case involving a fight between undertaking establishments over possession of a body, Justice J. A. deGruyter, sr., has handed down a decision that a body is not personal property and is not subject to a writ of detinue.

The decision was made in the case of Harden & Harden against the Campbell undertaking establishment, in litigation for the possession of the body of Clarence Lincoln, colored. It followed two court sessions.

The justice decided that if one undertaker embalms a body, another undertaker can not take charge of it even if relatives of the dead person so desire.

Groups From Throughout East to Mark Baltimore Temple Anniversary.

Baltimore, May 29 (Spl.).—Shriners from throughout the East will attend the fiftieth anniversary celebration of Boumi Temple, to start Friday and continue for three days. One of the largest parades ever held here will be staged in connection with the celebration.

Leaders of Shrine activities who will attend the various sessions and gatherings include John N. Nebrell, of Norfolk, imperial potentate; Leonard P. Steuart, of Washington, imperial chief rabban; James H. Price, of Richmond, imperial recorder, and Walter S. Sugden, of Sisterville, W. Va., imperial oriental guide.

Out-of-town groups from all parts of Maryland, Virginia, West Virginia, the Carolinas and Pennsylvania are expected to send marchers to participate in the parade. Approximately 1,500 are expected, to augment the 500 members of Boumi Temple.

Richmond, May 29 (AP).—Gov. Peery, today proclaimed June 14 as Flag Day in Virginia and June 15 as Magna Carta Day.

West Virginia Camps Ready For Convicts

1,000 to Be Sent to Open-Air Jobs, Relieving Crowded Prison.

Moundsville, W. Va., May 29 (Spl.).—Completion of arrangements for moving 1,000 prisoners from the State Penitentiary here to work on State highways and gardens has just been announced by Dr. Clifton F. McClintic, warden.

A prison camp at Cowen in Webster County will be one of the largest and will be equipped to receive 400 convicts by the middle of June. Prisoners assigned there will build a new Webster Springs-Richwood road.

The second camp has been established in Clay County for 200 prisoners and it is already receiving them. They will work on the Newton road.

The third camp will be at Cherry Grove in Pendleton County and will also care for 200 convicts.

Dr. McClintic said the camps are being built for use in winter, thus relieving congestion at the penitentiary. Built for 820 convicts, the penitentiary now has to care for 2,200, and some 500 are lodged in county jails.

In addition to the camps, 100 convicts have been assigned to the State prison farm here, 20 to the State school at Bradley, and 62 to the State Industrial School for Boys at Pruntytown, Grafton suburb.

Boy, 11, Rescues Sister, 5, Bitten On Face by Dog

Waynesboro, Pa., May 29 (Spl.).—William Demuth, 11, of Wayne Heights, near here, saved his 5-year-old sister, Martha, from possible death yesterday when she was attacked by a dog at the farm of Omar Frantz, a neighbor.

The children were en route to the Frantz home on an errand for their mother. The dog leaped at the girl when she entered the yard and bit her in the face, inflicting severe gashes.

The boy seized the dog and held it until the Franz family came to their assistance. A doctor said the girl's injuries are not critical.

Mrs. Hume Named Institute Delegate

Gordonsville, Va., May 29 (Spl.).—Mrs. J. H. Hume has been appointed by Gov. Peery to represent the Commonwealth of Virginia at the eighth session of the Institute of Public Affairs, at the University of Virginia, July 1 to 14.

Mrs. Hume has been actively identified with parent-teacher work, having served as president of the local association for the past four years and of the county council for two years. This will be the fourth time that Mrs. Hume has attended the Institute of Public Affairs as a representative of the Commonwealth.

Mrs. L. M. Acree, also active in P.-T. A. work and community affairs, has likewise been commissioned by the Governor a delegate to the institute and will attend the sessions with Mrs. Hume.

Liquor Option Vote Set Aug. 7 In Rockingham

Becomes First County in State to Ballot Under New Statute.

Harrisonburg, Va., May 29 (Spl.).—Rockingham will be the first county in Virginia to vote on local option under the new alcoholic beverages control act.

Judge H. W. Bertram, in Circuit Court today, set August 7 for the special election after petitions bearing signatures of more than 30 per cent of the voters were presented to him by members of the Emergency prohibition committee. The petitions, which have been circulated since the A. B. C. act became effective, contained 2,265 names, 738 more than the 30 per cent required. Rockingham cast 5,107 votes in the Roosevelt-Hoover election.

Rockingham is certain its traditional dry stand in the special election. There will be no opposition to the church forces sponsoring the movement. In the October referendum, Rockingham piled up 1,500 votes against the repeal of the eighteenth amendment. This was the largest dry margin cast in the State.

The voters will express their views on two issues—whether beer and wine above 3.2 per cent alcoholic content should be sold, and whether alcoholic beverages other than beer and wine should be sold. The A. B. C. board already has indicated it will not place dispensaries in counties where dry sentiment is overwhelming.

The referendum does not apply to Harrisonburg, which voted for repeal of the eighteenth amendment by a margin of 250. Beer and wine licenses have been issued here by the A. B. C. Board, but there is some speculation as to whether a dispensary will be located here. Harrisonburg was the last town in the State to have saloons under preprohibition.

Roller Herd Leads Rockingham.

New Market, Va., May 29 (spl.).—The J. S. and Paul Roller herd of 10 Jersey cows again leads the Rockingham County Dairy Herd Improvement Association for milk and butterfat production for May. The herd averaged 774 pounds of milk and 45.26 pounds of butterfat.

Dr. Stirewalt, Circuit Rider, Dead, Aged 84

Lutheran Leader Many Times Headed Synod of Tennessee.

New Market, Va., May 29 (Spl.).—The Rev. Dr. Jerome Paul Stirewalt, 84, former president of Tennessee Lutheran Synod and retired minister, died at his home here yesterday.

For 50 years, Dr. Stirewalt attended to spiritual needs of members of 13 separate congregations, as pastor, being one of the old school of circuit-riding ministers.

Dr. Stirewalt preached his first sermon in Pine Church near New Market in 1871, and retired from active work in June, 1920, after organizing more than a dozen congregations, preaching 2,764 sermons, and officiating at 923 funerals and 365 weddings.

In 1858 he entered New Market Academy and in 1880 received his M. A. degree from New Market Polytechnic Institute. In 1914 the degree of doctor of divinity was bestowed upon him by Lenoir College, Hickory, N. C.

Tennessee Synod honored Dr. Stirewalt repeatedly by appointment and election to its most important position of trust. He was five times elected president, and served eight years as secretary. He served on the examining committee of the synod for 22 years. He was born April 11, 1850, and was New Market's oldest resident.

Besides his wife, two sons, Prof. W. J. Stirewalt, principal of New Market High School and president of the Citizens National Bank, and the Rev. Martin L. Stirewalt, D. D., Salisbury, N. C., also survive, as well as a nephew, the Rev. Arthur J. Stirewalt, Lutheran missionary, Tokyo, Japan.

Funeral services will be conducted tomorrow. Burial will be in Emmanuel Lutheran Cemetery.

BLACKIE BEAR
By D. SAM COX

Uncle Joe Has a Blue Monday.

Uncle Joe and Aunt Judy had a good time over at the home of Uncle Joe's mother. She hadn't seen them in a long time, and she was so glad to have them visit her that she fixed them up more good things to eat than you ever heard of. It took them a long time to get through with their supper, but after a while they finished and went into the sitting room for a good talk.

"Now, son," said Mammy (that's what Uncle Joe called his mother), "I reckon you have done lots of things since you were here, and I want you to tell me all about them. The last time you were here you told me about having lots of trouble with a bear and a coon and some other wild animals that would eat up your chickens and pigs and things. Do they keep on bothering you?"

"Well, they did give me lots of trouble till a while ago," said Uncle Joe. "I used to sleep with my gun by my head every night, because I didn't even know when Blackie Bear would come and get a chicken or a goose or a pig; but somebody killed Blackie, and since then I haven't had any more trouble. And I have a mighty good dog, and now I can sleep good every night. Nobody in the world could come in my yard when Howler is there."

The next day was Sunday, and Mammy had just the best dinner she could fix, and they all had a good time. Uncle Joe would keep talking about his good dog at home, and how he knew he was looking after his things while the master was away. Early Monday, Mammy was up and had them a good breakfast, and they were soon on the way back home.

It was away along toward dinner time when they got in sight of home. Howler, who was shut up in the back porch, heard them coming, and he began to howl like somebody was beating him to death.

"I wonder why Howler isn't out at the gate," said Uncle Joe. "He sounds like he is under the house." By this time they had come to the gate, and he saw the note that Blackie had tacked up there.

"What's this?" said Uncle Joe, as he went to open the gate. "It looks like somebody has been fooling around here while we were gone."

He went up to the gate and read the note, "Compliments of Blackie Bear," and the rest of it. And then he called, "Here, Howler, Here, Here, Here!"

But Howler only howled the louder; for he couldn't come.

Then Uncle Joe opened the gate, and Aunt Judy drove the donkey into the yard. He told her to drive on over to the barn, and he would go and see what was the matter with Howler.

TENDING A FURNACE
. . . no fit job for ANY woman!

Furnaces are built for men . . . the shovel that seems "no weight at all" to your husband is heavy for you . . .

OF COURSE, your husband does all the furnace tending in your house. (At least, that's his story.)

But he forgets all those evenings he was kept late at the office.

He forgets all those below-zero days (and we had them aplenty last winter) when you had to stoke every few hours.

All in all, wasn't it considerably more than one ton of coal that you had to shovel between November and April?

Does he know the facts?

The last time you suggested oil heat, your husband probably replied, "Fine—but we can't afford it."

Well, that used to be a good answer—15 years ago. Since then, prices have gone down—down—down.

For instance, for the average 6 or 7 room house, $25 is the down payment on a Petro-&-Nokol Oil Burner, complete with 275 gallon oil storage tank. And only $15 a month pays off the balance.

It "Buys Itself"

When your furnace gets an oil burner that is exactly suitable, you save money in any number of ways. On fuel bills. On cleaning expense. On laundry. Yes, even on doctor bills—because the whole family is healthier.

Think what it means to go out shopping; or to a bridge game, knowing that on your return you will find the house at the same comfortable temperature as it was when you left.

Remember, however, that only an oil burner that is "just right" for your furnace or boiler gives such big savings.

A man you can trust

The Petro-&-Nokol representative comes to you from America's oldest and largest oil-heating organization. He has a complete line—3 distinct types—16 different models—66 sizes.

So you can see he is never tempted to sell the wrong type or size of oil burner. He has everything. His recommendation is unbiased. His sole interest is to make sure that your furnace gets an oil burner that will operate with maximum efficiency and economy.

We supply oil, too

This means that you get exactly the right grade—and unfailing supplies of fuel. We deliver our own oil in our own trucks from our own terminal. And it's our job to keep track of your oil supply—so that you never have to bother to phone for fuel. To insure the proper functioning of your burner, buy your oil from us.

Investigate Petro-&-Nokol now. If you decide to install one this Spring, monthly payments do not start until next Fall.

Furthermore, during the summer months, your Petro-&-Nokol acts as a hot water heater—gives you all you can use at trifling cost. Sending for information does not obligate you in any way. Mail the coupon now.

West Virginia Youth's Slayer Is Sentenced

Mountaineer Enters Plea of Guilty in Court at Martinsburg.

Martinsburg, W. Va., May 29 (AP).—Joe Bear, aged mountaineer indicted for the slaying of Charles Kees, a youthful neighbor, near the Bear home in Back Creek Valley in March, entered a plea of guilty to second-degree murder here today in circuit court and was sentenced to the State prison at Moundsville for 5 to 18 years.

Kees was shot dead while talking with friends near Bear's home. Bear is reported to have told police he and Kees had quarreled.

Four other mountain men, Ted Clark, Carl Shipper, Harrison and Austin Bear, charged with knowing of the crime and conspiring to suppress evidence and obstruct justice, also were indicted at the recent grand jury sitting and are scheduled for trial at this term.

Dewey Elliott, Virginian, charged with having fired the shot that killed 15-year-old Luther Lamb in the suburbs here, pleaded guilty to involuntary manslaughter and was sentenced to spend seven months in the county jail. The youth was mysteriously shot on his way home from school.

David Barrett, 18, indicted for a felony involving theft of cigarettes with another youth, Ernest Montgomery, pleaded guilty and was given a parole for five years. Montgomery escaped from jail after they were arrested, but later was recaptured. He pleaded guilty today in circuit court and was given a year in prison.

Gordonsville Plans Recreation System

League to Offer Children Supervised Play.

Gordonsville, Va., May 29 (Spl.).—At a meeting of citizens interested in the welfare of children of Gordonsville, the Community Recreation League was organized.

The government of the league was vested in an executive committee composed of C. M. Jones, president; Mrs. W. B. Baughan, vice president; O. B. Omohundro, secretary-treasurer; J. Thomas Walker and Mrs. L. M. Acree.

The purpose of the organization is to provide supervised recreation. The playground will be under the supervision of Charles Leslie Blankenship, a member of the Gordonsville High School faculty. The program includes tennis, baseball, handball, horseshoes, and track for the older boys, and basket ball, tennis and other games for the girls. The younger children will be provided with suitable games. Swimming also has been arranged. The school library will be open two afternoons each week.

Young Temple Child Headed For Fortune

Has 5-Year Film Contract; Gracie Barrie Will m. c.; About the Showshops.

Reprinted from yesterday's last edition.

By Nelson B. Bell.

It has been demonstrated through the decades—about three of them in all—that three years is the average length of a child screen star's career.

Notwithstanding this statistical finding, the Fox Film Corporation has plans for little Shirley Temple which encompass a five-year period, at least.

Hailed as the greatest child-find since Jackie Coogan skyrocketed to fame nearly a generation ago, this new infant sensation who is credited with "stealing the show" by her precocious work in "Stand Up and Cheer," now at Loew's Fox, has a five-year contract with her producers, who confidently believe she will outlive the term of agreement in popularity with the public.

Five Years Old.

Shirley, who recently celebrated her fifth birthday, should be a wealthy young lady at the age of 10. As was done in the cases of Jackie Coogan, Jackie Cooper and all the others who have achieved screen note at tender years, her parents already are laying plans to conserve her potential fortune for her education and future.

Hollywood, of course, is overrun with child talent. The records of the Central Casting Bureau show something in excess of 1,500 youngsters to be registered there for possible film assignments. Every film company on the Coast is busy searching this number for "another Shirley Temple." Judging from past experience, however, it may be another ten years or so before another "baby" leaps into the Klieg light who will capture the popular fancy as Shirley is doing.

Currently, Shirley is being starred in "Baby Takes a Bow," a vehicle especially created for her use following her hit in the song of that title in "Stand Up and Cheer." For Paramount, she recently completed the title role in "Little Miss Marker" and is scheduled for another production on that lot.

We Have Our Doubts.

Personally, I must confess that these benighted old eyes fail to perceive any such spark of genius in the charming screen performances of Little Miss Temple as made itself immediately apparent the instant Jackie Coogan, for example, made his first appearance with Charlie Chaplin in "The Kid" and forthwith set about stealing the picture from him.

She is, to be sure, a poised and completely captivating juvenile personality who, for the moment, possesses a remarkable brightness of feature and vivacity of spirit that register perfectly on the silver sheet. These are qualities, however, which may disappear at any time, the rapid growth of healthy and ebullient young babyhood being what it is, and I wonder, then, if there is really an underlying endowment of greatness that will tide the tiny tot over?

I confess again, I do not perceive it in "Stand Up and Cheer." Charm, yes; any such endowment as Jackie Coogan had, no. Perhaps just another Baby Peggy.

One of the first important events at the newly opened Crystal Pool, out at Glen Echo Park—and here is one of the most perfectly planned and equipped natatoria in the country, if you must know—will be a bathing style show staged in conjunction with the Hecht Co., in the near future. This bit of circulatory rumor is contingent for fulfillment, needless to say, upon a slightly more favorable dispensation from the weather man than attended the opening of the pool for the season last Saturday.

London Premiere.

"The House of Rothschild," starring George Arliss and now on view at Loew's Columbia Theater, following its earlier success at the Palace, established a $46,000 gross at the charity premiere of the picture in the Tivoli Theater, London, England, last Thursday night, according to cable advices received from Maurice Silverstone, his London representative, by Joseph M. Schenck, president of United Artists.

The premiere was attended by a brilliant audience, including the American Ambassador, Mrs. Anthony de Rothschild, celebrities from the stage and screen and members of British royalty.

Tickets for the night sold as high as $50 each and long before the start of the film, the house was packed to the legal limit of its standees.

The entire proceeds of the performance were donated to the Personal Service League and the Fund for German-Jewish Women and Children.

Speaking of Maxine Doyle, Gracie Barrie returns to the stage of the Earle Theater on Friday as an outstanding feature of the vaudeville bill—as was revealed that she would in this space a month or so ago when she wrote the booking to this desk from Cleveland. I say "speaking of Maxine Doyle," because it was Gracie, it will be remembered, who stepped into the breach last September 1 when Maxine terminated a three-year engagement as mistress of ceremonies at Thirteenth and E streets and departed by her trick roadster for a screen career in Hollywood—which, by and large, she seems, at the moment, in a fair way of achieving. Gracie and her greatly liked voice will be welcomed back by many staunch admirers.

Dots and Dashes.

Having compiled a record of 9,256,430 friendly marital spats—or thereabouts—during the early months of their married life, Lupe Velez and Johnny Weissmuller scored one more the last few days of her engagement at Loew's Fox last week...Senorita Velez finally got tired of being a "golf widow" and shipped Johnny back to Hollywood...Or somewhere... Speaking of the Fox, Lou Brown, in charge of Loew advertising and publicity, is around again after four days in bed...And reverting to Lupe, she is the first star I have ever seen all cheered up by the news that her option had not been taken up... Backstage a week ago Saturday, she told me she had been trying to break her M-G-M contract for a year...But they wouldn't let her... Always had been a free-lance, liked it better, made more money, could work on the stage when she wanted to, so what? ... So when she got word from her agent that she had not been renewed, she did cartwheels, nip-ups and front-overs... Crazy people!...The way "Stand Up and Cheer" has been cut and assembled may not suit me—and who cares?—but the way that Hillbilly, whoever he is, who gives Stepin Fetchit so much trouble, up in them thar hills, sings his song does his Charleston, certainly does...A comedy riot in any man's show ...Last week at the Rialto's season...Closes every June of late years, if you recall...And Hardie Meakin is still perversely opening his new shows on Wednesday...This one with Jimmy Durante and Lupe Velez in it, at any rate...It being Memorial Day, for one reason...And it being Jimmy and Lupe, for another... After that, what, Mr. Meakin?...The newly formed Variety Club is giving away scholarships to the dramatic desks ... A graceful and a generous gesture...Having contributed an appendectomy to the surgical eminence of Emergency Hospital about a year ago, Walter Von Herbulis, panjandrum of the Club Michel and Michel Roof, has gone and done it again...Only this time he is in Garfield after an operation on his hip...Regards to all his friends...And he will see them upon the Roof—Michel, not Garfield—in about a week...Fees for hunting licenses for that tiny brown rabbit out in my back yard—rose garden to you, fella—will be $5... Line forms on the right!

Contradicting earlier pronouncements, the latest bulletin from the Warner offices yesterday made known that when Gracie Barrie comes to town on Friday she will, after all, act as mistress of ceremonies once again. It has dawned on the Warner executives that this would be an excellent opportunity to give Audrey Seiber a fortnight's vacation. So that is what will be done the weeks of June 1 and 8, while Gracie is here both to sing and announce, she being adept at both. So now you know.

Smoking Room Stuff!

With all of these Mae West jokes floating around, have you heard what Mae said to him the first time she met Joe Penner?

Well, what she said to him was this: "Hi, Joe!"

Betraying a Dual Personality

If this were one of the Talmadges, Dorothy Mackaill, Toby Wing or any other of the acknowledgedly athletic Hollywood actresses, it would be no news—like the dog biting the man—but since it is the chill and sedate Ann Harding who is going up into the air after that high one, that is something else again! Or maybe Miss Harding is just coming down after having volleyed it back. At any rate, it is an unusual picture of her.

Riotous Farce Rocks Rafters With Laughter

'Jimmie's Women' Is a Gay and Risque Concoction Hilariously Played.

Reprinted from yesterday's last edition.

THE CAST:

Billy Wells ..... Freddie Sherman
Thomas ..... George Calvert
Algernon Simpson ..... Orris Holland
Teddie Kane ..... Mary Loane
Jimmie Turner ..... Roy Roberts
Robert Fowler ..... Burke Clarke
Dr. Richard Turner ..... Romaine Callender
Samuel Kane ..... Raymond Bramley
Mrs. Samuel Kane ..... Kathryn Givney
Florence Standish ..... Ruth Abbott
Mrs. Reginald Van Alstyn ..... Adelaide Hibbard

By Nelson B. Bell.

By recourse to a fast-moving, racy and ribald conjugal comedy—which in the final analysis is utterly innocent—the National Theater Players last night blew the lid off of reticence and inaugurated what what will prove a week of cyclonic laughter on E street.

Not since the days of "Baby Mine," "Twin Beds," "Getting Gertie's Garter" and similarly explosive dramatic documents has such laughter been heard in a local theater as punctuated acts two, three and four last night—especially four and least of all one because any first act is necessarily too expository of character and plot trends to devote itself primarily to hilarity.

"Jimmie's Women" is in no sense an important play. Myron C. Fagan wrote it with a keen eye to situation, a trifle too much verbosity and no perceptible literary grace. But he made it pretty consistently amusing and, at times, daringly and uproariously funny. It is trip-hammer farce and was played surprisingly near the proper key and tempo last night, despite the fact that a sudden substitution of bills had reduced available time for rehearsal.

The Old, Reliable Will.

It is all about a tricky will with a great many clauses controlling the inheritance of a young man who will be fabulously wealthy, provided he marries properly and by a certain time. Jimmie Turner is a considerable rounder and has an aunt who would like to clear the way for her own daughter to marry him.

There are, however, several other young men who would like to marry her daughter, Teddie, and several young women, of the stage and not, who would deem it no hardship to marry Jimmie.

Upon this premise Mr. Fagan has founded a fable that moves swiftly, occasionally gets just a little complicated and once or twice is seemingly as frankly risque as any comedy—bedroom or not—has any blushing right to be. And, as has already been stated, for reasons that will not be disclosed here, the whole business is as innocent as an unborn egg.

The piece is played with more spirit, more verve and more of the genuine spirit of comedy than the National Theater Players have revealed in the past several years. I recall no play of theirs within the last three years, at least, that is comparable to this in power to arouse an audience and rock the rafters with roars of laughter.

The Stellar Players.

The chief contributors to this unbridled surrender to mirth are Freddie Sherman, Ruth Abbott, Roy Roberts, Mary Loane and Orris Holland, cast in a part a little too young for his years. It is virtually impossible to choose among these for stellar honors, since all perform their heavy tasks blithely, skillfully and enthusiastically.

In the roles made of sterner stuff, absolutely essential to afford the contrasting note to accentuate the comedy, Kathryn Givney stands foremost, closely flanked by Romaine Callender, Raymond Bramley, who reveals a remarkable versatility as the Caspar Milquetoast husband, as against last week's thundering Roman general; Burke Clarke and Adelaide Hibbard, in an extremely brief part. George Calvert contributes a vastly improved colored butler and garners a full quota of laughs on his own account.

Miss Givney's Tough Job.

It is doubtful if Miss Givney will have any more arduous assignment than her present one any time during the season, or any in which she will acquit herself with greater credit. She never cracked a smile—and in "Jimmie's Woman" that is something!

Charles Squires' setting for the four acts and John McKee's direction add further luster to a production and a performance that wholly justify the cancellation of "Both Your Houses" and the substitution of this riotous bit of business, if irresistible seasonable entertainment is what you are after.

Labor Headquarters to Move.

Monogah, W. Va., May 29 (Spl.). Removal of the State headquarters of the West Virginia State Federation of Labor from Monogah to Charleston June 1 is announced by John B. Easton, of Williamstown, federation president.

Mount Jackson Poison Victim Reported Better

Mount Jackson, Va., May 29 (Spl.).—Rockingham Hospital attaches said yesterday that Freeman Rinker, 45, prominent local resident, found a week ago in a tourists' camp near Harrisonburg suffering from poisoning, still is in a critical condition, but has a fair chance of recovery.

Store Owner Is Robbed While Awaiting Thieves

Danville, Va., May 29 (Spl.). A series of robberies at his grocery store caused A. P. Keesee, owner to sleep there to protect it.

Police today were looking for $47, taken from his trouser pockets as he slept. They learned that when Keesee went to bed he forgot to lock the door.

Straight From the Studios

Robert Montgomery Is to Become Athletic Film Hero; Paul Muni Also May Do Screen Nijinski Soon; A Glimpse of the Passing Show.

Reprinted from yesterday's last edition.

By Edwin Schallert.

Hollywood, May 28. — Robert Montgomery will probably become an athletic hero, at least in the films. He is leading in the poll for a vigorous actor to enact the chief part in "Death on the Diamond," a baseball story, which M-G-M will produce with Edward Sedgwick directing.

DOROTHY ARZNER.

The story is by Courtland Fitzsimmons, who was responsible for "70,000 Witnesses," a football yarn made by Paramount. Clyde Bruckman and Joe Sherman are collaborating on the screen play; and Lucien Hubbard will produce the tale for Metro.

Montgomery has been fairly active in sports around Hollywood, with polo taking up considerable of his spare time, and the studio feels he will be a good type for "Death on the Diamond," the title of which pretty well explains what takes place.

"Such Women Are Dangerous," As You Know.

While sometimes decidedly lacking in story strength, and originality of purpose, "Such Women Are Dangerous," featuring Warner Baxter, shown in preview, offers several performances of distinct interest and has various amusing moments. What one misses is ingenunity in the plot treatment, as some of the situations can be pretty consistently imagined in advance, and the actual culmination appears a little too far fetched. Baxter's being placed on trial for murder, for instance, on account of some very circumstantial evidence, strains at the probabilities. The most unusual performance is that given by Rochelle Hudson, as the young girl fascinated by the famous author, and who eventually commits suicide. She is a bit like the character in "Strictly Dishonorable," though she ends her hero-worshipping career tragically. Rosemary Ames is nominally the leading woman, and Mona Berrie gives a vampish character, while Henrietta Crosman, Frank Conroy, Herbert Mundin and Irving Pichel round out the cast. Mundin is especially amusing. The picture was directed by James Flood.

Picture Pageant Now Passing.

William Darling, Academy winner for "Cavalcade," has been signed by Fox to make the sets for Will Rogers' next picture, "Judge Priest," a story by Irvin S. Cobb. John Ford will direct.

"Jane Eyre" has started in work at Monogram, with Virginia Bruce and Colin Clive playing the leads.

El Brendel has signed to star in another Technicolor musical film, two reels in length. No title as yet.

Peggy Fears is writing an original story in which she will play and also direct. No title.

Paul Harvey, Barbara Weeks and Ann Howard have been added to the cast of "She Was a Lady," with Helen Twelvetrees. Donald Woods, Doris Lloyd, Jackie Searl and Carol Kay.

William Powell has been given a long-term contract at M-G-M.

Gloria Stuart has bought an interest in a California gold mine, and will spend part of her vacation "roughing it" in Sonoma County.

Walt Mason, Himself

In and Out.

There was a panic, long ago, when I was strong and in my prime, and every one was short of dough, and I had reached my bottom dime. In broken shoes I paced the street and sought employment all in vain; there was no place where I could eat, I wandered homeless in the rain. "If I could only get a job, that would provide my bed and board," I cried, with melancholy sob, "my joy would grow like Jonah's gourd. I would not ask for wages high, nor care how many hours I toiled, if I could have my daily pie, or something roasted, baked or boiled." There came an end to my despair, and on the pay roll I appeared, and I had first-rate clothes to wear, and pushed rich pastry through my beard. Then, being fattened up once more, my bosom swelled with righteous rage; "I will not stand for this," I swore; "I will not work for such a wage. These long work hours I do not like, they're fit to drive a man to drink, and I will organize a strike, and put the whole works on the blink." The boss sized up my game and laughed, and no compunction did he feel, but down the elevator shaft he dropped me with excessive zeal. And now I'm weatherworn and old, and helpful morals I dispense; I look around me and behold great crowds who show that sort of sense.

Dishonorable.

President Roosevelt's cogent protest against the coconut oil tax which Congress wrote into the Revenue Act of 1934 is not expected to result in legislative action. Congressional leaders say there is no time to correct this injustice to the Philippine Islands at the present session. Obviously they are seeking an excuse for inaction. The wide discrepancy between the coconut oil tax and the spirit of the Philippine Independence Act was fully understood in Congress when the revenue bill was adopted. Both houses deliberately voted to repudiate a promise they had made to the Filipinos. Even if the question should be reconsidered, in line with the President's message, it is doubtful whether any change in the tax would be made.

Congress expects a high degree of integrity of every Governmental agency. Even slight irregularities often bring about Congressional investigations. Yet Congress is surprisingly prone to forget that it has moral responsibilities of its own. In passing the Philippine Independence Act last March free importation of 448,000,000 pounds of coconut oil from the Philippines was promised. On May 1 the Philippine Legislature accepted this proposal in accordance with a pledge by Filipino leaders to the President. But two days later Congress, under the influence of the farm bloc, sent to the White House a measure imposing what amounts to a tariff on coconut oil. By thus shamefully repudiating an agreement which had already been accepted at Manila, the good faith of the American Government was seriously impugned.

Three forceful arguments are marshaled by President Roosevelt in seeking reconsideration of this blunder. The first of them alone should be sufficient to bring about abolition of the coconut oil tax. "It is," the President said, referring to the coconut oil tax, "a withdrawal of an offer made by the Congress of the United States to the people of the Philippine Islands." Offers that have been accepted in good faith can not be honorably withdrawn by the action of one party. Such conduct, especially if it remains uncorrected, tends to bring contempt upon the entire Government as well as upon Congress.

Toward Slum Clearance.

Washington's alleys, which have been with us since the days of slavery, will not disappear overnight as a result of the passage of the Capper-Norton bill in its amended form by the House. But the passage, which may be expected to meet with Senate approval, is a decidedly happy event. It is especially gratifying to The Washington Post, since our series of articles on alleys and slums were instrumental in bringing the evil conditions attendant upon them to the attention of the legislators in whose hands lies the remedy.

Under the amended bill funds for the first work on this laudable project will come from the Public Works Administration. At first $500,000 will be available, that amount having been set aside in anticipation of the passage of the act. With this amount much good work can be done toward the removal of alley housing that tends to "foster crime, dependency and disease." What is most necessary now, providing the Senate gives indorsement, is the appointment of an adequate "authority"—as the enforcement agency will be known—which will expend the money wisely. The available sum is small for a task of this magnitude, but is sufficient fully to test the efficiency with which such expenditure can be made.

The authority will have to remember, moreover, that slum removal is not its sole problem. Tearing down disgraceful slum buildings, unless decent homes are simultaneously provided for those displaced, merely tends to spread the infection from one spot to another. More important almost than removal of old buildings is the anticipated erection of modern, sanitary, low-cost housing units for those who will have to go somewhere to live when it is no longer legal—in 1944—to occupy an alley dwelling.

Under the terms of this bill Washington has an opportunity to do something really worth while. The limited dividend corporation which the bill authorizes may well show other slum-infested communities the way to rid themselves of areas which no modern civilization ought to condone.

Legislation By Prejudice.

Passage of 23 District bills, including only one of major importance, was offset Monday by failure of the House to act on the old-age pension bill and defeat of the measure providing for compulsory liability insurance for taxicab drivers. As usual, a small clique of representatives hostile to District interests dominated the House. It was necessary for the District Committee to withhold the old-age pension bill from consideration on the floor to avert a filibuster against all District legislation.

Acceptance of the McLeod bill requiring irresponsible drivers to secure liability insurance is a distinct gain, although this measure faces one-man opposition in the Senate. But the haphazard procedure of the House in dealing with local problems is distressing to everyone who is interested in the proper development and government of the Capital City. Inadequate consideration, arbitrary opposition and slipshod methods mark the course of nearly all major District bills in the House. In view of the ignorance, prejudice and indifference that are manifested by this body in connection with District matters, it is almost surprising that local government is able to function as well as it does.

A Two-Edged Sword.

Congressional action on the Wagner Labor Disputes Bill, reported to the Senate from committee last Saturday, is of course impeded by the decision in the Weirton case, handed down yesterday by a Federal district court in Delaware. The decision questions the Constitutionality of Section 7a of the Recovery Act and obviously that fundamental issue should be finally settled before any further action is taken on the Wagner bill, which is built throughout on the assumption that this clause is Constitutional.

The value of the courts as a bulwark against hasty and ill-considered legislation is thus further attested. The inherent weaknesses of the Wagner bill, entirely aside from the issue of whether or not it is Constitutional, might well have prevented passage at this session of Congress. But on the one hand the bill had been somewhat improved in committee from its original rigid form, and on the other hand a strong emotional inducement for its enactment has been provided by the rioting in Toledo and other industrial centers. Prior to the Weirton decision there was more than a chance that it would be pushed through Congress on the specious and overworked plea of emergency.

As evidence of the background at Toledo begins to reach Washington it is becoming apparent that the rioting there has been largely the work of professional troublemakers. The disorders seem to have had little to do with the abuses which the National Industrial Adjustment Board, proposed by the Wagner bill, would seek to eliminate.

If further inquiry confirms these reports it will be additional proof of the fatuous character of this legislation, which seeks to cloak what would be an uninformed and essentially political body in Washington with dictatorial authority over disputes of which its members would probably be almost completely ignorant. If legislation establishing such a board could be rushed through Congress under pressure of rioting—which is doubtless one reason why there has been rioting—the same sort of pressure could easily be exercised on the board after it came into being. Indeed there is much to indicate that the machinery proposed by the Wagner bill would tend not to diminish industrial warfare but definitely to promote it.

This is so primarily because the underlying objective of the bill is to take the solution of industrial disputes out of the hands of those who understand the problems involved—the employers and employes directly affected—in order to vest authority in a centralized political board appointed by the President "by and with the advice and consent of the Senate." In the naive language of the revised bill the President, in appointing the employer and labor representatives to this body "may consult organized representatives of employers and employes." So the board may be assisted by the indirect advice of the only groups really competent to find solution of industrial disputes!

In the solution of industrial disputes there is probably no halfway house between the free cooperation of the constituent elements in industry, and dictatorial compulsion of the Fascist variety, which, of course, involves the elimination of all trade unionism, as already witnessed in Italy and Germany. The Wagner bill is a long step toward a Fascist control of industry, for, as Samuel Gompers long ago pointed out, it is idle to suppose that the State can give active sponsorship to trade unionism without also exercising active control over it. An incredible blunder, from the viewpoint of labor more than any other group, would be made if the rational line of industrial self-government, pointed by establishment of the automobile labor board, were dropped in favor of the Fascist principles underlying the Wagner bill.

So it is most fortunate that a halt to this trend has been brought by the decision in the Weirton case. And, as intelligent labor leaders should be quick to notice, that decision cites the Norris anti-injunction act, designed to protect labor interests, as a chief reason for refusing the injunction asked against the Weirton Steel Co. in the ostensible interests of labor.

Those who play with obviously two-edged swords, of the character of the Wagner bill, can scarcely complain if they end by getting cut themselves.

A Turning Point For NRA.

The executive order suspending fair-trade practices and price-fixing agreements of local service industries marks a turning point in the history of the NRA. Its significance is best appreciated by contrasting the present chastened attitude of the Recovery Administration with former ambitious efforts to bring every little corner shop and store under its jurisdiction. It was a foregone conclusion that such a fantastic crusade would fail, but it was by no means certain that the NRA would admit its error and begin a strategic retreat without first wielding all the coercive weapons which the Recovery Act has placed at its disposal.

The decision to withdraw is a victory for the cause of industrial self-regulation. The democratic principle of governing with the consent of the governed is recognized as applicable to industries as well as to individuals. Certain exceptions are made, regarding regulations of hours and wages, though these may prove to be non-enforceable in many cases. But abortive and costly efforts to regulate trade practices and fix prices for thousands of local units are to be abandoned, unless 85 per cent of a local group desire to effect an agreement.

Despite retention of powers of doubtful constitutionality and more than dubious efficacy, the executive order deserves to be commended for its courageous reversal of a mistaken policy. Fears of bureaucratic domination of American industry are alleged by this official acknowledgement that effective regimentation under the Recovery Act requires the cooperation of the regulated industries in order to succeed. The manner of withdrawal, the decisions that will have to be made in border-line cases, and subsequent revision of policies and practices under retained codes will present many knotty problems. But a guiding general principle is at last discernible in the midst of the confusion.

If the NRA resolves to confine its activities to the supervision of industries effectively organized on a national basis, the problem of disciplining recalcitants will be relatively easy. So long as the NRA was dissipating its energies in futile endeavors to achieve unattainable and socially undesirable ends, its motives were suspect and its prestige was seriously impaired. With reasonable and limited objectives, it should be in a position to make a constructive contribution to industry and to assist the efforts of business leaders to curb wasteful competitive practices.

Pressure Against War.

By promptly forbidding the sale of arms and munitions to Bolivia and Paraguay President Roosevelt has courageously assumed leadership in a major effort to stop the senseless Chaco war. The move is in line with the growing public antagonism to private traffic in arms. But it leaves unsolved most of the major problems which confront efforts to minimize the menace of war by the embargo method.

Before issuing his Executive order the President consulted with other American governments and obtained assurances of cooperation. Just because he did not wait for the proclamation of formal embargoes by other nations, or for an international agreement on the subject, this action may be an important factor in bringing the issue to a head at Geneva and among the ABCP governments of South America. This constructive action at Washington places the issue squarely before the League of Nations. It may afford a test of world opinion on arms embargoes, even though this is a very simple case in which the question of allocating blame does not enter.

In authorizing the President to forbid arms shipments to Bolivia and Paraguay, Congress did not pass upon the larger issue of executive power to lay down an arms embargo against a specified aggressor. These two belligerents are regarded as equally at fault. It is a relatively simple matter, therefore, to prohibit the sale of war materials to both of them. Application of an embargo to a nation deemed to be an aggressor—for which power is also sought by the Administration—is a much more complicated issue.

By the Johnson amendment the Senate has refused to permit the President to discriminate between fighting nations. It insists that Congress should not relinquish a power that conceivably might result in drawing the United States into war. And the speed with which this special resolution pertaining to the Chaco conflict was enacted tends to strengthen the argument that delegation of this authority is not essential for prompt action. On the other hand, it is extremely difficult for the State Department to negotiate with other governments in matters of this kind without knowing what the attitude of Congress may be.

A further point is that we have as yet no precise definition of the term "munitions." Does it include such commodities as steel, cotton and nitrates as well as guns and shells? Industrial countries have no need for finished munitions. They can manufacture their own. Consequently, arms embargoes may prove wholly ineffective unless all the raw materials of which munitions can be made are included. And if embargoes are to be so extended, should food and clothing remain exempt?

Congress will not undertake to solve these complicated issues at the end of a busy session. Having disposed of the immediate issue and having given the United States leadership in the movement to eliminate the baneful influence of arms manufacturers in international disputes, it may well subject to further study the broad problems of the joint embargo against an aggressor state. In this inquiry the researches of the Nye committee should prove an important step.

Nudist Suit Pressed.

Nudism is one of those things we vacillate upon. Once, in a moment of righteousness, we decided never to mention the cult again. The next day we did so, with due apologies. We were nearer right the next day than the first, for it seems that nudism is something that can not adequately be covered (pun intended) in one day.

Our present return to nudism is impelled by a careful reading of our pink evening contemporary. There, last evening, on the front page, was the astounding headline: "Nudist Suit Pressed." Despite our antipathy for nudism we turned to the article to learn just how the seeming impossibility was accomplished. There was little enlightenment.

The story had nothing to do with pressing nudists' suits. It was all about the Government's intention of censoring some books on nudism. This places us in a dilemma. We are against nudism. We are equally opposed to censorship. So about all that we can do is to go back to our original stand, and promise never to mention nudism again, unless its suit is pressed in a manner violating the NRA code for tailoring establishments.

As a Bimetallist Sees It.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: Briefly, in monetary matters I am a bimetallist, that is to say, I believe in the age-old money metals, gold and silver. In this country there has always existed a feeling that silver should be restored to the monetary systems, not necessarily by actual coinage, but by storage of large bullion bars against which easily handled paper currency could be issued.

The contest against silver culminated about six or seven years ago, when the English in India, placed that country on the gold basis, melting silver coins into bullion and throwing silver on the market, sending the white metal down from 64 cents an ounce to 24 cents. Thereupon came the world depression. The prices of farm commodities followed silver downward.

The bill now before Congress to place our metallic reserves at 75 per cent gold and 25 per cent silver is in the right direction whether other countries agree or not, for our huge gold reserves can easily carry that much silver at par with gold.

President Roosevelt appears to hesitate because sending silver up may have a bad effect on our Chinese trade. To this I say, cheap silver helps the fighting war lords of China to get cheap dollars to pay their troops, but dear silver should help the peaceful people of China, who number more than 400,000,000 and for hundreds of years have buried their savings in silver, to buy more of the manufactured goods and farm products of this country.

Shades of Democracy!

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: The unparalleled effrontery of a Congressman proposing a $10,000-a-year pension for life for any Federal employe is an insult to the people of the United States. "Ten thousand dollars a year for life," out of a tax ridden public! The way Congress flings away the people's money is a crime.

The biggest crime against the Constitution since secession was the gold steal. Talk about Tammany and then out-Tammany the maddest tiger of them all! The detestable, smug, self-arrogated impudence of this clowning circus administration is enough to make Gongressman-haunters of Washington, Jefferson, Lincoln—every sane and wise President we have had. I wish they could hound Congress back into sane decencies of minding the other man's business—and their own.

Telepathic Communication.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: Your special article on telepathy suggests a definite experience of long-distance communication:

A member of my family had undergone a critical operation which left her limp and practically bloodless. As soon as I could visit her, I carried with me a bunch of violets, which I purchased near the U. S. Treasury. As I handed them to the sick woman, she told me that she saw me buy them; told me where I bought them, and even related the most trivial details in the purchase.

Later, when I was on a picnic in Rock Creek Park, although she knew nothing of the picnic, she related to me who were present and other details. But on completely recovering her health, this power of discerning distant happenings left her to a great extent.

I am not a follower of Sir Oliver Lodge, nor have I even the remotest tendency to visit a seance or accept the commercialized powers of mind-readers. On the other hand, I seriously believe that as our race develops in as yet unknown or at least unused powers of intuition, many persons will possess what only one here and there now possesses.

Inconsistency.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: How is it that the hand of the law is ever alert to crush every transgression of even the least of the laws and yet the new Administration may trifle with or trample on our God-given liberties, even to ignoring the Constitution and business ethics?

Why should we waste our money on Representatives if they are not faithful to their trust? As I understand it, we did not give any of our legislators permission to "experiment" with the Constitution, but how very few have shown themselves loyal and worthy of this great trust.

In Accord With T. R., Jr.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: What young Theodore Roosevelt says is quite true: "Our Constitution is being violated, business despoiled and the Government rapidly becoming a despotism."

In addition the Roosevelt Administration is wasting the substance of the people. However, I don't think the people will stand for it much longer.

"General Rainforth."

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: In your esteemed journal of May 27, there appeared an article captioned "'Rain Makers' once reaped harvest in drought districts." In this article the name Gen. J. E. Dyrenforth was mentioned.

This man was my grandfather and in giving his name the Associated Press was incorrect. His name was Robert St. George Dyrenforth.

I believe that during the rain-making experiments he was Associate Commissioner of Patents, or was, shortly thereafter. In connection with these experiments his associates dubbed him Gen. Rainforth.

There is nothing further that I can add to the fully informative account given by the Associated Press.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: I was very much impressed reading an article which appeared in The Post of May 22, entitled "Santa's First Anniversary."

I wish to congratulate Mr. Hopkins for his victorious achievements toward relieving suffering humanity. Keep up the good work, sir! I bid you God's speed. May you live many, many more years to serve your country and your fellowmen. May you live to see the dawn of a new day in the political world.

W. C. Whitney, Navy Man, Recalled

By C. H. Wetmore.

WHEN the United States Navy passes in review before the President tomorrow and affords a stupendous maritime spectacle many an old-timer's memory will carry him back to the first Administration of Grover Cleveland and that man in his Cabinet, William C. Whitney, who will go down into history as the father of the new fleet, built of steel and iron, which supplanted the "hearts of oak" of which the U. S. S. Constitution is a relic.

Whitney's persistent appeals to the Congress for appropriations and his insistence that vessels of wood were doomed as fighting craft resulted in the creation of what was known as the White Navy, among the units being Boston, ordered to Hawaii when it was feared trouble might arise over the dethronement of Queen Liliuokalani; Yorktown, upon which Robley Evans gained the sobriquet "Fighting Bob," by reason of his defiance of the entire Chilean navy at the time several American sailors were killed in Valparaiso, and Olympia, Dewey's flagship at Manila.

From soon after the Civil War until the creation of the White Navy the United States' fleet would have been at the mercy of any one of several foreign powers which commenced building ironclads immediately after the Monitor and the Virginia demonstrated in Hampton Roads the efficiency of the metal ship. Due perhaps to exhaustion our country was laggard in the creation of sea defense. For nearly 20 years the flag was carried over the oceans by such vessels as Pensacola, Lancaster, Mohican, beautiful as marine pictures, but worthless in combat with such ships as Shamrock of England, Hansa of Germany, or even Blanco Encalada or Almirante Cochrane of Chile. Except for having marine engines as auxiliary to sail power American men-of-war differed but little from the phantom ships of Capt. Marryat's imagination.

Muzzle-loading cannon, usually 12 on each side, rested upon wooden carriages and could be wheeled into position for broadside firing with muzzles protruding through gun ports, or drawn back for the purpose of cleaning and reloading. Round shot were stored near each piece. Cartridges were kept below. Resting upon projections from the bulwarks were swabs and rammers.

Vessels like these, argued old sea dogs for several years after the Virginia (the "Merrimac" of history) sank the Congress and the Cumberland, would hold their own against any "iron pot." It was not a fair test, that engagement in Hampton Roads. The Union ships were rammed, not sunk by gunfire. Moreover, they had no opportunity to maneuver.

Opportunity came in 1879, to show what a frigate could do, when the Peruvian ironclad Huascar engaged the Chilean corvette Esmeralda off the port of Arica. Here was a ship built in England, the hull of iron, two breech-loading guns in an iron turret amidships, sides of iron which were let down during action. Opposed was a vessel of all wood construction and mounting 16 more guns than Huascar; but they were muzzle-loading.

Because of the heavy ground swell which rendered it difficult for Huascar's gunners to take effective aim, the engagement lasted several hours. Esmeralda fired many broadsides and the enemy was frequently peppered with cannon balls. None did more than dent the sides or glance off the turret. When finally the Peruvians found the range their shells destroyed half Esmeralda's crew and tore open such holes beneath the water line that finally she went down bow first.

This first complete demonstration of the uselessness of a wooden ship against one of iron caused the powers then engaged in a naval race to redouble work upon vessels of the modern type. But the United States was still hesitant. It was fully seven years later that William C. Whitney compelled attention, then action, which resulted in a modern navy.

The Post Impressionist

Star Three.

Postoffice, Wednesday.

"IT'S no use!" laughed H. G. Wells. "You can't come that on me. A clever piece of work, but the days for Chatterton forgeries have passed. There never was a Moses Ibn Ezra."

Scene: Washington. Time: An afternoon during H. G.'s recent visit here. Theme: Our modest Column about Solis-Cohen's translation from those poems by one of "the three stars" in Moorish Spain's literary firmament; our remarking how this Moses had not only echoed his contemporary Khayyam, but written some phrases which—through sheer coincidence—Shakespeare was to rewrite several centuries later.

H. G., of course, was spoofing. He doubtless knows this Ibn Ezra better than we do. But it occurs to us that what Wells said with laughter others may believe in seriousness. For a knowledge of medieval literature is scarcely widespread, which we regret, and our Column has moments of levity, which we don't.

Call the witness Heinrich Brody! He is neither a German, as his first name might suggest, nor an Irishman, as his last name might. He lived in Germany, but Herr Hitler interfered. Dr. Brody is a Czechoslovak by birth and—ask any Hebrew scholar at Georgetown—one of the greatest authorities on the subject in hand: formerly a resident of Prague and Czechoslovakia's Chief Rabbi, in later years Director of Berlin's Institute of Hebrew Poetry. Going to primary sources, he contributed the article on Ibn Ezra in the "Encyclopaedia Judaica," he edited the Hebrew text and wrote the introduction for the Cohen translation.

In the latter, witness deposeth and says:

"Moses ben Jacob (in Arabic, Abu Harun Musa) Ibn Ezra was born in Granada about 1055-60 . . . descended from a prominent family, whose members enjoyed authority and distinction at the courts of Moslem rulers . . . carefully reared and . . . given a many-sided education . . . He was married, probably early in life, but, though he speaks frequently of his children, his wife is not mentioned—the reason for which omission is a subject of conjecture only.

"His wide knowledge, his high-mindedness, genuine faith, gentle humor and benevolence brought him much affection." But when, in 1090, the Berber Almoravides conquered Granada, Ibn Ezra had to begin his long exile. "While we can not trace all his journeyings, or their order, it is evident that he led a life of restless wandering—a life doubly hard because he had been used to peace and comfort, and because the political state of the lands of his exile was one of disturbance and often of danger. . . . His sorrows were increased as he learned of the deaths, one after another, of his friends; and, to crown his miseries, it would seem that his children, when they grew up, caused him great grief by their unfilial conduct."

He was now poor. "Gift-bread could not have been to the liking of a Moses Ibn Ezra; but, hardest of all to bear," he was surrounded by ignorance and feared "he might likewise degenerate . . . In moments of clear thought, our poet tried to rise above his misfortunes; none the less, the burden of his poems had become . . . a lament for the sadness of his life." He died about 1138.

In a literary sense, though in no other, Ibn Ezra was a radical among his people. "He rejected," says Dr. Brody, "the opinion that, because the laws of poetics established by the Arabs are unknown to the Bible, they are alien to the spirit of the Hebrew language," and there is extant, in the Bodleian Library, the larger portion of a work in which he defends his position."

His diction Dr. Brody finds "precise, clear, elegant." The poet admits to 6,000 verses. Some are occasional, a few—which he calls "sins of youth"—are satires and love-songs. His liturgical poems, never collected into a single volume, are to be found in the rituals of his faith, except those of the German and Polish minhag, "and likewise in various . . . manuscript collections. His non-liturgical poems he himself collected and arranged in a Divan. . . .

"His own collection has been lost. However, there is to be found in Oxford a Divan collected by another hand. A second manuscript is in the collection of Salmann Schocken, of Berlin. A third, that of the Gunzburg library in Moscow, seems to have disappeared." Several more non-liturgical poems of Moses Ibn Ezra exist also in manuscript.

There you are. If you won't believe in Ibn Ezra's existence on the word of Dr. Brody, or on the evidence of the manuscripts, we'll consider your disbelief a high compliment to Dr. Cohen as an original poet—which he is in other volumes—or as an equally lofty estimation of ourselves.

* * *

And as for Ibn Ezra's parallels of Omar Khayyam and anticipations of Shakespeare, why, we could, if we wished, quote you stanzas wherein the Granadan anticipated Byron's "Give, oh give me back, my heart" and one of the most famous passages in Tennyson's "Maud."

We could.

But we won't.

Instead, we will say to you what Cohen says Ibn Ezra said of men in general:

The words of men are a flowing brook,
They [illegible] it and are not sated;
They would not be satisfied
Were the sea emptied therein.

Along the Potomac

With Carlisle Bargeron

IT seems to be an anomaly or something that the East has taken Secretary Henry Wallace to its bosom while out in the Middle West where he was reared they are burning a fire under him. Here in the East he wrote a pamphlet entitled "America Must Choose," in which he abhorred against what his department was having to do, and the editors all said what a clear-headed man was he. Shortly after that he began writing for a newspaper syndicate on "Statesmanship and Christianity," and about that time it occurred to some ingenious writer to say that he was becoming so popular that he looked like Presidential timber for 1936.

BARGERON.

It is seldom that I have seen a man moving so fast, particularly in view of the fact that two of his cronies, Thinkers Tugwell and Jerome Frank, were looked upon with some disfavor by the writers of some of the commendatory pieces.

• • • •

So warmly has he been taken into our embrace that Capitol Hill has found it impossible to deny him additional authority. Apparently this is because he has such a delightful way of abhorring. He just goes up to Congress and abhors and Congress gets to abhorring with him. In the resultant orgy of abhorrence out comes the additional authority he wants. Even now it is just about to break Congress' heart to deny him dictatorial authority over all agriculture and everybody who has to do with it, down to the corner grocery store. In the end it probably won't.

But out in the Middle West the Chicago Tribune is doing some abhorring of its own.

It has dug up a story charging that while the Secretary is urging the farmers to cut their corn acreage by 20 per cent and receive a Government bonus for doing so, a seed company in which he is interested is urging them to buy a seed that will raise just as much corn on the reduced acreage.

It is not quite right to say it is the Secretary's seed company. He makes much of this in his controversy with the Tribune. The controlling stock is, instead, owned by his wife. It is the Hi-Bred Corn Co., of Grimes, Iowa, that is involved. The Secretary says that in its early days he owned the majority stock, but as it expanded he couldn't raise the money to "maintain my interest." Mrs. Wallace, partly by reinvesting rental payments and partly by investing additional cash, became the largest single stockholder by late 1931."

What also seems to rile the Tribune is that the Wallace corn company does its advertising in Wallace's Farmer, once owned by the Secretary, and of which he served as editor until he took over the Department of Agriculture. The paper now carries the information on its masthead that he is editor "on leave of absence."

The advertising of the wonder seed that will increase the yield per acre an average of 19.8 per cent is said to have been carried along with pleas by the Secretary that farmers hurry and sign up the crop reduction agreements. The Tribune figures it out that 5,000,000 more bushels of corn will be produced in Iowa by virtue of this seed than would otherwise have been.

Mr. Wallace insists, however, that the Hi-Bred seed can not have any economic effects "for years to come" because the company simply can not turn out the seed. Its commercial production is an exceedingly complicated matter. In 1934 the seed will account for only 1½ per cent of the crop, he says. He doesn't seem to deny, though, that there may be a demand for the seed, that the Hi-Bred's facilities may be taxed.

• • • •

I can't help believing that the Tribune's indignation shows a lack of a sense of humor. It apparently does not understand that this is what is meant by "planned economy" and by "action." It is not the slightest bit more inconsistent than the provisions of the securities and stock-exchange legislation intended to "pulverize" big industry and the NRA's policy of building it up, the creation of the Export-Import Bank and the tariff legislation to stimulate foreign trade, coupled with the Johnson resolution outlawing debtor nations which militates against it; the heroic efforts to put men to work and then through the assiduous development of class hatred, encouraging them to strike.

It's "action" and "counteraction" by which we go round and round and end up right where we were. And as for the increased business that should come to Mrs. Wallace's seed company, it may be said to come under the head of "redistribution of wealth."

Banquet Honors Student Editors

Lonaconing, Md., May 29 (Spl.). The staff of Orange and Black, school publication, was honored at a banquet at Central High School tonight by the Parent-Teacher Association. The paper won highest honors in its class, including the all-American rating in the National Scholastic Press Association.

Frank Lee Carl, city editor of the Evening Times, Cumberland, spoke. Others who spoke were Ruth Ritchie, Miss Gertrude Darnley, Miss Helen Marshall, Miss Rosella Smith, Calvin Buckley, Miss Mary Esther Smith, John F. Rose, editor of the Piedmont Herald; Miss Daisy Cline, Lowell M. Sowers, the Rev. Patrick J. Bradley, rector of St. Mary's Catholic Church, and Charles L. Kopp, county superintendent of schools.

Hitting Policeman Costly to Merchant

Luray, Va., May 29 (AP).—A good healthy swing that R. L. Printz, local merchant, took at Town Sergeant G. W. Slusher, cost the former a $500 fine in court here. A jury deliberated two hours and ten minutes after hearing Slusher describe how he was struck by Printz's fist and knocked to the sidewalk when he tried to collect a bill.

Printz claimed he was struck first with a blackjack and that he punched the sergeant in self-defense. Printz was charged with simple assault, but drew the maximum fine.

Maryland Road Officials Deny Delay in Work

Uhl Answers Charges Lee Blocked Philadelphia Link Construction.

Baltimore, May 29 (Spl.).—Denials were issued today by G. Clinton Uhl, chairman of the State Road Commission, and L. W. Kern, chief of the commission's right of way division, to charges that E. Brooke Lee, of Montgomery County, former member of the highway commission, had deliberately delayed progress of work on the new Philadelphia road.

The charges were made yesterday by Charles E. Bryan, formerly a member of the Maryland Public Works Administration. He declared Mr. Lee countermanded orders to purchase rights of way for the road, and had otherwise delayed the work. Previously, Mr. Bryan had charged that Mr. Lee's object in thus hindering the Philadelphia road project was to provide for the use of public funds in building roads in other sections of the State, particularly in Montgomery County.

Today Chairman Uhl was asked if Mr. Lee had ever given orders to halt acquisition of rights of way for the Philadelphia road.

"He did not," Mr. Uhl replied.

The same question was asked Mr. Kern. His reply was the same.

Both declared that the delay in the work was caused by owners of property along the proposed route who are holding out for excessive prices for their land. They indicated that condemnation proceedings might be necessary in order to get the needed land for the highway.

Reno to Speak To Farm Union

Groups From Five States Will Attend Parley in Baltimore.

Baltimore, May 29 (Spl.).—Thirty-three local units of the National Farmers' Union in Maryland, Delaware, Pennsylvania, Virginia, and West Virginia will be represented here tomorrow at a meeting of that organization and the National Farm Holiday Association at Carlin's Park.

Among those who will speak are Milo Reno, of Iowa, noted agricultural leader of the Middle West and president of the Farm Holiday Association; E. E. Kennedy, of Illinois, secretary of the Farmers' Union; Senator Lynn Frazier, of North Dakota; Senator Elmer Thomas, of Oklahoma, and Representative William Lemke, of North Dakota.

Senator Kennedy is scheduled to be the morning speaker, and the others will address the audience throughout the day. Accommodations have been provided for 50,000 visitors.

Principal topics to be discussed at the meeting are agricultural bills now pending before Congress, which the legislators will explain. This is said to be the first meeting of the Farmers' Union and the Farm Holiday Association in the East.

Back Creek—Dry Run, Miss Daisy Orndorff; Gore, C. W. Parish; Lamps, F. J. Wolverton, and Russells, C. D. Sale.

D. C. Man Loses Arm, Result of Auto Crash

Fredericksburg, Va., May 29 (Spl.). D. C. McClure, of Washington, yesterday underwent an operation for an arm amputation in the Mary Washington Hospital, following a collision between his automobile and a truck driven by Lester Rowland, of South Norfolk, Saturday night.

McClure's wife and daughter suffered minor cuts and bruises.

The Once Over

By H. I. Phillips.

THE LADIES' WAR ON CRIME.

If anything has made America's gangsters and outlaws nervous it is the news from California that a war on them by the women's clubs of the country is proposed.

• • • •

San Diego started the movement with a secret committee of 600 women spread through the city to get the lowdown on all persons whose lives or actions are at all mysterious, and the idea is taking hold throughout the Nation.

• • • •

It looks like a great proposition. Not even Dillinger could hope to keep his hiding place a secret if woman's natural curiosity ever got organized.

• • • •

Anybody who has ever seen or heard a woman's club in action can realize what it would mean to have all the women's clubs of America on the warpath against those members of the community who think they're tough because they haven't been caught yet and don't shave often.

• • • •

Some of our leading desperadoes may not weaken much when they hear the cops are on their trail, but the toughest public enemy in the lot is bound to go haywire at the prospect of having to hear, "Now you listen to me!" in a shrill feminine voice.

• • • •

Many a gangster who never seemed easily scared by municipal police, Federal agents and armored cars is going to take it on the run from a group of hysterical ladies who have had their suspicions aroused.

• • • •

The idea of the California women is to have women organized in all communities and secretly assigned to dig up the dirt in certain districts, making reports on all persons whose actions don't square with honest behavior. Fairly swift action is expected, if only from the old angle that a woman can't keep a secret.

• • • •

We may read the following in the newspapers any day now:

Chicago, Ill.—"Three Gun" Snaggers, notorious bank robber and gangster, walked into police headquarters today and gave himself up. "It's those women's clubs," he said with a sigh of relief as he turned over his weapons. "With all those gals on my trail I couldn't stand it."

• • • •

New York.—Joe (Honey) Glotz, public enemy No. 3, whose arrest followed a comparison of notes at the regular Tuesday meeting of the Ladies' Aid Bridge Club and some clever detective work by the Girls' Friendly Society, said he was glad to be in custody.

"With the women of America organized against criminals I couldn't look a dame in the face without getting cold shivers," he said limply.

HAPPY DAYS.

Income taxes are to be made public in 1935. It is going to seem swell to lots of people to be able to telephone the Treasury and see how the neighbors say they spent their money.

There are 10,000,000 people idle in the United States, according to official estimates. And about 20,000,000 people who have jobs and are practically that way, as you may have noticed.

First Courthouse Site to Be Marked

Rockingham County Will Have Ceremony June 14.

Harrisonburg, Va., May 29 (Spl.). Direct descendants of Daniel Smith, who owned the house in which the first court in Rockingham County was held, will take leading parts in ceremonies marking the spot on June 14.

The Daughters of the American Revolution have erected a monument on the site, 2 miles north of Harrisonburg on the Valley pike.

Miss Jane Logan, daughter of Conrad T. Logan, member of the faculty of the State Teachers College, and Miss Virginia Laird Conrad, daughter of Dr. Charles E. Conrad, will unveil the marker. George N. Conrad, former State senator, who also is a descendant of Daniel Smith, will preside. Mrs. Laird L. Conrad, regent of Massanutten Chapter, sponsoring the event, will present the marker.

State Near Bottom Of Highway Fund

Richmond, May 29 (Spl.).—A summary of public works construction on Virginia roads up to March 31, as reported by the United States Bureau of Public Roads, shows 46 miles of highways completed with 263.2 under construction. In addition 66.7 miles have been approved for construction. The total amount of public works roads funds allotted to Virginia for the present fiscal year was $7,416,757. The balance available, as of March 31, for all new projects was $186,648.20.

On the Federal aid highway system in Virginia, outside muncipalities, there had been constructed, at the time mentioned, 11.1 miles. Under construction were 78.9 miles. Approved for construction were 43.1 miles, and the balance available for new projects was only $63,885.38.

The National Gallery

ROBERT LEE DOUGHTON, Representative from North Carolina. As chairman of the powerful House Ways and Means Committee, he has handled some of the most important legislation this session, including tariff, tax and silver bills. Tall, raw-boned, he is proud of his position. When it was recently suggested that the President might appoint him to Tariff Commission, he let it be known that he was satisfied where he was. Served as director of North Carolina State prison, 1909-1911. Member Sixty-second to present sessions. From the tobacco district, he has sponsored bills to reduce prices of that commodity 10 per cent. Pro-administration, independent, speaks his mind.

Such a large proportion of those who have been pictured by Mr. Robles have asked for the originals that The Washington Post is saving all these drawings to honor the requests of any future members of "The National Gallery."

Virginia Farm Youths to Hold 4-Day Parley

Blacksburg, Va., May 29 (Spl.). The ninth annual State convention of the Virginia Association of Future Farmers of America will be held at Virginia Polytechnic Institute June 18 to 21, Prof. H. C. Groseclose, executive secretary, announced today. Judging contests, a track meet, school for leadership, and the finals of a State public speaking contest make up the program. About 800 agricultural high school boys from all over Virginia and their instructors are expected.

There will be four judging contests with a team being permitted to enter in only one. The contests will be in live stock, dairy, poultry, or crop with nine classes to be judged in each contest. Judging will take place June 19 and 20. Individual winners will be awarded medals. The four high individuals will make up teams to represent Virginia in out of State contests.

The preliminary athletic contests will be held June 19 with the finals being run June 21. Plaques will be awarded the winning team in the relay and the high scoring team in the contest. Medals will be awarded individual winners.

Four contestants, a representative from southwest, northern, eastern and middle Virginia, will take part in the finals of a State-wide public speaking contest June 19. The winner will represent Virginia in a regional contest to be held this fall. Regional winners will compete in Kansas City in November for a National prize.

Dr. Julian A. Burruss, president of V. P. I., will speak at the evening session June 20. A business session will be held June 21 followed by a radio program at noon. An election of officers will be held before the finals of the track meet are conducted that afternoon. The third degree ceremony and the awarding of medals at the business session June 21 will conclude the rally.

Policeman Appeals From Loss of Job

Cumberland, Md., May 29 (Spl.). Seeking reinstatement as a patrolman in the police department, Glyn Davis will be given a hearing Friday night before the Cumberland Civil Service Board. Davis was dismissed two weeks ago by Commissioner of Public Safety Harry W. Matheney.

Davis was accused of conduct unbecoming an officer in formal charges. The dismissed officer appealed to the civil service board. The decision of the board will be submitted to the mayor and city council, June 4, by the chairman, I. L. Hyman.

Coed Tries to Mail Letter in a Fire Box

Chambersburg, Pa., May 29 (Spl.).—An Ohio high school girl en route with her class on a sightseeing trip to Washington here yesterday afternoon sounded a false fire alarm when she mistook the fire alarm box for a mail box.

Virginia Funds Up $1,069,638 In 10 Months

Treasurer Reveals State Finances in Good Condition.

Richmond, May 29 (Spl.).—Finances of the Commonwealth of Virginia are "in splendid condition," despite a decrease in the general fund, John M. Purcell, State treasurer, declared today as he pointed out that during the last ten months of the State's fiscal year there had been an increase of $1,069,638.25, compared with the corresponding period of last year, in the total of all funds in the treasury.

A. B. Gathright, State comptroller, concurred with Purcell in his opinion as to the condition of the treasury.

The treasurer said he is expecting large collections between now and June 30, when the fiscal year ends, and that the $2,000,000 in bank and corporation income taxes anticipated during that period gave reason for the belief that even the general fund, which has shown a slump of $1,673,098, would reflect a far better condition than was shown April 30.

A total of $1,000,000 of certificates of indebtedness will be sold by the commissioners of the sinking fund Thursday at noon, and Purcell pointed out that these certificates are a refund of a similar issue of highway certificates of indebtedness. They are based on the gasoline tax and the motor vehicle license tax, which are segregated from the general fund. In the last ten months of the fiscal year the gasoline tax receipts have shown an increase of $361,700 over the receipts from that source in the corresponding period of last year.

Somerset Berry Profit Is Small

Wide Price Range Proves Puzzle to Growers.

Crisfield, Md., May 29 (Spl.).—With an average price of about $2.50 per crate, Somerset County strawberry growers stand to do little better than break even on this year's crop.

Hundreds of truck loads of fruit have been going to market daily, Virginia furnishing a large quantity, and thousands of crates being shipped by train and truck from Marion Station, the strawberry center of the Eastern Shore, 7 miles north of here.

Prices have ranged from above $4 to as low as $1.75 per crate, on the same day, under the same auction block. With the crop excellent, growers are at a loss to understand why there should be such a wide price range.

Memorial Day.
General Hugh Scott.

This is Memorial Day. I do not know any better way in which I can celebrate it than by paying humbly a tribute to one of the greatest soldiers in the history of America—Hugh Lenox Scott, who died one month ago, 80 years old.

I recommend to all readers, military or otherwise, Gen. Scott's splendid autobiography, called "Some Memories of a Soldier." It was published in 1928, and contains nearly 700 pages, with a full index, and copious illustrations. It is a fine, manly record of a useful and noble life, and is beautifully dedicated to his wife.

I first had the honor of meeting General and Mrs. Scott about 25 years ago, when I gave a course of lectures at West Point. Gen. Scott was Superintendent of the U. S. Military Academy, and belonging to the resident officers were two men who were among the best conversationalists I have ever known—Col. C. W. Larned and Edward S. Holden, the Librarian. I have never enjoyed good talk more than with these men.

When Scott was fighting in the Philippines, he came within an ace of losing his life. He raised his revolver in the jungle, and

A bullet from the side knocked the gun out of my hand, throwing it some distance away, and when I stooped down to pick it up, I found some fingers cut off and hanging preventing the hand from taking hold. I tried my left hand quickly, but to my great surprise I discovered that it had received three bullets and likewise refused to function. The reaction was quite indescribable. My hands had always done what I wanted them to, and now they had suddenly struck, and I could hardly understand it.

But while he was stooping down to pick up the revolver, an entire volley was discharged over his head, which would have killed him had he not been wounded and the pistol knocked out of his hand.

General Scott, like many reticent and modest men, was as dignified as he was unassuming. He told me that rather than go through again the period of recovery, during which he could not use either hand, he would far rather die. I'm glad he didn't, though.

His relations with the Indians, his knowledge of sign-language, his absolute honesty and fair dealing with them, so that they had confidence in his word, is forever a part of American history.

One could not talk five minutes with Gen. Scott without being conscious of his absolute fitness for whatever task he was willing to undertake, of his supreme sincerity, and of the goodness and kindness of his heart.

He will be missed by innumerable individuals whom he helped by his counsel and by his unselfish generosity.

Kiwanis Plans Camps for Boys

Charlottesville Club to Study Methods for Acquiring Site.

Charlottesville, Va., May 29 (Spl.). The local Kiwanis Club yesterday discussed plans for purchasing a camp site for boys and girls, to be known as the Charlottesville Kiwanis Park.

The proposed site is 6 miles southwest, adjoining the city's new reservoir, with 58 acres in the plat, a portion of the Maury estate.

The location is regarded as ideal for a camp. A plentiful supply of running water can be secured from a mountain stream to provide a swimming pool, while drinking water can be obtained by tapping the pipes leading from the reservoir dam.

The club plans to erect a large recreation hall with ample accommodations for indoor sports. It is also proposed to erect log cabins for sleeping quarters.

Final plans for the project will be discussed at a meeting of the board of directors of the club, to be held tomorrow evening at the home of Frank Ix, jr., an active member of the club.

NRA Faces Slash In Danville Wages

Cotton Mills Post Notice Hours to Be Cut.

Danville, Va., May 29 (Spl.).—The management of the Riverside and Dan River cotton mills today posted notices warning over 6,000 men and women that effective June 4, their earning opportunities will be cut 25 per cent in compliance with the recent NRA order.

At present two daily shifts are operating each on a 40-hour week basis, and the weekly pay roll is $100,000. Under the new ruling a second shift will be used only in those departments where it is necessary. The hours of work will be 6:30 a. m. to 12:30 p. m., Mondays to Fridays inclusive.

Union organization has been proceeding here quietly for several weeks.

Teachers' Senior Class Play to Be Given Friday

Fredericksburg, Va., May 29 (Spl.).—The senior class of the Fredericksburg State Teachers College will present "the Queen and the Cardinal," from "Henry VIII," in the college's Open Air Theater at 8:15 p. m. Friday.

Leads will be played by Mary Frances Rowe, Beth Altstetter, and Polly Daniel. Miss Rowe, who took the lead in "The Swan," senior production last year, is in her sophomore year of college. Miss Daniel is president of the college drama club, of which Miss Altstetter is also a member. Miss Roberta Barnett is directing the production.

No End of Books

By Theodore Hall

"The Farmer Bought a Cow!"

THERE is a highly pleasant "Heigh-ho, the merry-o" air about Arthur Pound's novel, "Once a Wilderness" (Reynal & Hitchcock, $2.50). With the material of old John Mark, sturdy Michigan dairy farmer, and his wide patriarchal family on the 640 acres of the hereditary "Mark Section," almost anything might have resulted. Enough family complications are mentioned to make it a "problem" novel. Enough hard work and spiritual confinement are touched upon to grant it passage to a "novel of the soil" in the best Scandinavian tradition. Labor troubles in a nearby city might have made it grimly proletarian in effect. A few more homely bucolic sayings would have made it quaint and faintly rhetorical.

THEO. HALL.

But none of these things happened. Instead, we have a faithful, affectionate and deliciously convincing picture of the value of good land and good blood. No one, I am sure, can help feeling homesick for the security of this scene—the broad meadows and rich fields and orchards (owned outright—no mortgages for the Marks family!), the big, simple houses for sons and daughters, the festival tables groaning with food "off the place," and the family, strong, able, blessed with good digestions and good dispositions, deep-rooted and buttressed on its own land. Really, it's almost too nice. Even the few peccadillos, on the theory that one touch of irregularity makes the whole world kin, do not dull this Utopia—or make it less apart from most of us.

• • • •

For Mr. Pound, himself a son of Michigan, chose one swift and vanishing era for his tale—the few years in which southern Michigan changed from the last comfortable perfection of pioneer times to the reign of the automobile chain-assembly belt. No other part of the country has made so sudden a jump. I can not say whether there are any proud and squire-like stock-breeders left between Lansing and Pontiac, but the emphasis has certainly changed. That is the sole pathos behind "Once a Wilderness."

Though John Marks' children grew up, married, lost their children, or died themselves, though Capt. John's fine figure lost its strength, though there were disappointments and heart-breaks, no sadness shadows the book. Flora may wail her lover lost in the Spanish War. Henry may die in the burning barn. Clayt may be thrown back from the city. It is all part of the picture balanced by the fecundity of natural cycles, by the stability of "Mark Section" itself.

• • • •

What's the story? That's not the point. To be sure, Capt. John takes Flora to England to buy Ayrshire cattle, and she falls in love with an English cousin. Or Clayt works his way up in an automobile factory. Or Rawl forgets his wife for a red-headed woman. Or any other little sequence in 10 years of a large family, which you can almost imagine yourself.

The point is that for all the little ups and downs, that "Heigh-ho, the merry-o" tune runs right through the tale. Don't mistake me—there's no choiring of ballads in the gloaming; the Marks are sober folk. But the rich, human life, the very normal duties and satisfactions of these people who stayed on their land, echo with the ageless cheerfulness of that old nursery song.

It faded from the ears of the Marks grandchildren when they turned toward the city. Now that statistics tell us the tide has turned back to the land, I wish Mr. Pound would give us as good a novel on the joys of that reunion.

New Navy Bill Assures Posts To Midshipmen

Seniors Express Joy Over Prospects on Eve of Graduation.

Annapolis, Md., May 29 (Spl.).—Joy pervaded the ranks of senior class midshipmen today when it became known that the last step to enact the Vinson bill, providing commissions for all who desire them, was taken in Washington.

A survey shows that of the 463 graduates who will be awarded diplomas, 332 will be commissioned ensigns in the line; 25 will receive commissions as second lieutenants in the Marine Corps, by their own choice, and the resignations of 105 will be accepted immediately following graduation. In accordance with a recent act of Congress the degree of bachelor of science will be conferred on all graduates.

The number resigning is much greater than in former years. Fifty per cent of the group, it is said, were impelled to the action by physical disqualification, chiefly defective vision. John Preston Wiley, of Washington, D. C., "honor" man, is slated for a position with a large oil company. There are five others with "star" rating whose resignations will be accepted. There are 24 "star" men in the class.

Graduation ceremonies will be held in Dahlgren Hall Thursday at 11 a. m. Rear Admiral Thomas C. Hart, superintendent of the Academy, will deliver the principal address in the absence of President Roosevelt and Secretary of the Navy Swanson, both of whom will be reviewing the fleet in North River. Admiral Hart also will confer degrees. Diplomas will be presented by Rear Admiral William D. Leahy, chief of the Bureau of Navigation.

Showers and chill winds dampened today's festivities. During the forenoon hundreds of visitors witnessed another demonstration of the physical drill under infantry arms by two battalions. The Academy Band gave a concert in the early afternoon, and at 5 o'clock the regimental dress parade was featured by the presentation of prize awards for excellence in professional and scholastic work and athletic achievements. Assistant Secretary of the Navy Latrobe Roosevelt presented a number of the awards.

John Preston Wiley, Washington, D. C.—The National Society Daughters of the American Revolution sword for excellence in seamanship, and the Gardner L. Cakey Memorial prize of a gold watch for graduating at the head of his class.

John Murray Wilson, Scottsboro, Ind., fourth "honor" man.—Sword offered by the National Society Daughters of 1812, for attaining the highest merit in electrical engineering; the Col Robert M. Thompson prize of a sextant for excellence in practical and theoretical navigation, and the company cup for winning the inter-company athletic competition.

Charles Blenman, jr., Tucson, Ariz.—The Secretary of the Navy's rifle for proficiency in using the rifle, and the Sons of the Revolution Cup for excellence in practical ordnance and gunnery.

John Jennings Waybright, Clarksburg, W. Va., name inscribed on the Col. Thompson Trophy Cup for influence in promotion of athletics and commendatory letter from Superintendent Hart, for like like qualities and for promotion of naval spirit and loyalty.

Commendatory letters from Superintendent Hart also were received by Edward Joseph Fahy, New York; Midshipman Commander or "five striper" of the regiment; Richard George Akeroyd, El Paso, Tex.; George Edwin Mumma, Findlay, Ohio; Frank Melvin Whitaker, Spokane, Wash., and Edward Farwell Dissette, Detroit, Mich.

Frank Allen Nuzum, Rockport, Tex.—Sword presented by the Society of Cincinnati, for highest standing in languages.

Walter Eugene Baranowski, Oshkosh, Wis.—Wrist watch offered by Colonial Daughters of Seventeenth Century, for excellence in history.

Nell Edgar Kinsaley, Waverly, La., second honor graduate—Wrist watch presented by National Woman's Relief Corps, for excellence in economics and government.

Gould Hunter, Fort Covington, N. Y., third class, Naval Order of United States—First prize, wrist watch, for knowledge of world history. James Robert Davis, first class, second prize—Letter of commendation and subscription to a news magazine. Junior contest—Kenneth W. Patrick, Huntington Beach, Calif.—Letter of commendation and subscription to a news magazine.

Thomas Kenneth Callister, Salt Lake City, Utah—Van Dyke prize of gold watch and chain, for best original article on naval or patriotic subject, also National Association of Mutual Savings Banks prize of $100 in cash for best original essay on savings and thrift.

John T. Probasco, Plainfield, N. J., second class—Thompson binoculars for first place in interclass sailing. Paul Van Antwerpen, jr., Cincinnati, Ohio—Thompson Monocular, for second place.

The Naval Academy's awards of gold, silver and bronze medals for small arms work, went respectively to John H. Brandt, Seattle, Wash.; Richard B. Lynch, Citronelle, Ala., and James W. Crowther, Longmeadow, Mass.

He plans to return to the Capital in the autumn.

Ickes Garden To Be Opened In Circle Tour

Wesley Heights Group Holds Annual Event Friday Afternoon.

Numbered among the gardens to be opened Friday for the benefit of the Wesley Heights Florence Crittenton Circle will be that of the Secretary of the Interior and Mrs. Harold L. Ickes, at 4880 Glenbrook road in Spring Valley. The garden is very extensive and includes a delightful little stream, which has been dammed to create a series of three pools in a wooded section of the estate.

Mrs. Horace L. Dawson is chairman of the garden tour which is an annual event of the Wesley Heights Circle. She has announced that approximately 12 of the community's loveliest gardens will be open, among them those of Mrs. Edgar L. Brawner, Mrs. William Earl Clark, Col. Rufus Maddox and Mrs. Arthur B. Heaton.

Tea will be served from 3 until 6 o'clock in the gardens of Mrs. Brawner and Mrs. Clark and the card of admission includes tea.

Assisting Mrs. Dawson in arranging the tour are Mrs. C. Chester Caywood, Mrs. George G. Whitney, Mrs. Howard G. Nichols, Mrs. David Friday, Mrs. William C. Miller, Mrs. Guy Whitman Leadbetter, Mrs. David P. Wolhaupter, Mrs. J. C. Freeland, Mrs. Bernard C. Smyth and Mrs. J. Craig Peacock.

The tour will start from the garden of Mrs. William C. Miller, at 4401 Cathedral avenue, because its central location makes it accessible to visitors.

Mr. and Mrs. Langdon Post, of New York City, are guests at the Mayflower while Mr. Post is here on a business trip and will return home tomorrow.

New York Tea Will Have D. C. Woman Hostess

Mrs. William A. White to Preside at Fete in Waldorf Astoria.

Mrs. William A. White, wife of Dr. White, of Washington, will be hostess today at a tea, given in the Perroquet Suite of the Waldorf-Astoria Hotel, in New York City, in honor of the wives and friends of the officers of the American Psychiatric Association which is holding its ninetieth annual convention in New York.

Those assisting Mrs. White will be Mrs. George H. Kirby, wife of the president of the association; Mrs. A. A. Brill and Mrs. C. Charles Burlingame, of New York; Mrs. William C. Sandy, of Harrisburg, Pa., and Mrs Thomas Bass, of Abilene, Tex.

Some of the out-of-town guests will be Mrs. George Hewitt, of Carthage, N. Y., former president of the New York State Federation of Women's Clubs; Mrs. Ross Chapman, of Maryland; Mrs. Arthur Noyes, of Howard R. I.; Mrs. Clarence Farrar, of Toronto, Canada, and Mrs. Edward A. Strecker, of Philadelphia.

2,000 Women Open Annual Meeting Here

Women's Auxiliary of the Plumbers' Association Plan Sessions.

THE Women's Auxiliary of the National Association of Master Plumbers have a full program today. About 2,000 women are here from all parts of the country in connection with the fifty-second annual convention of the association.

A breakfast in honor of the National officers and National directors will open today's activities. Mrs. Robert Liss, of Chicago, National president, will preside.

Members of the auxiliary will attend memorial services of the National association at 11 o'clock this morning at the Washington Auditorium.

The opening business session will be held at 2:30 o'clock this afternoon at the Mayflower Hotel. Mrs. Barrett will greet the out-of-town delegates. The appointment of committees will be one of the important businesses of the opening session.

The delegates will attend a vaudeville show and exposition of the most modern plumbing devices and accessories tonight at the auditorium.

The convention will continue tomorrow morning and afternoon at the Mayflower with business sessions. The election of officers will take place in the afternoon. A ball, which will be held at 9:30 o'clock tomorrow night at the Mayflower, will close the convention.

Curley Club at Baltimore.

The Curley Club will take part in the Maryland tercentennial celebration today at Baltimore. Members of the club and their friends will meet at 7:45 o'clock this morning at Union Station and will go by special coach.

The club will be assigned to the third division and will start parading at 9:30 o'clock. The parade will finish at the Baltimore Stadium. The Most Rev. Michael J. Curley, Archbishop of Baltimore, will hold solemn high field mass at 11 o'clock in the Baltimore Stadium.

Annual Luncheon.

The education committee of the Woman's National Democratic Club will hold its annual luncheon tomorrow at the clubhouse at 1526 New Hampshire avenue northwest.

Mrs. Edward P. Costigan, chairman of the committee, will introduce the speakers. Among those addressing the committee on "A Year of the New Deal" will be Mrs. Charles S. Hamlin, president; Miss M. Bakewell, Mrs. C. L. Hendrickson and Ellis Meredith.

Trip to Gettysburg.

The industrial and education departments of the local Young Women's Christian Association will sponsor a trip today to the Gettysburg battlefields.

A bus will leave at 9 o'clock this morning at the Y. W. C. A., Seventeenth and K streets northwest, and on the return trip will stop at Frederick, Md., to inspect the historic places there. Miss Saida L. Hartmand and Mrs. Irving W. Ketchum will be in charge of the outing.

The weekly meeting of the house committee of the Women's City Club will be held at 11 o'clock this morning at the club house. Dean Grace Hays Riley, chairman, will preside. Luncheon will follow in the coffee room.

Women Are Given Constitution Fund

Club Plans Educational Campaign.

NEW YORK, May 29 (Spl.). Mrs. Chester Alwyn Braman's late husband was a great admirer of the Constitution, consequently the Women's National Republican Club, 3 West Fifty-first street, is the recipient of a "fund for the defense of the Constitution," to be used for educational purposes, through speeches, broadcasts, publication or such other means as the club may decide

This has been announced by Mrs. George A. Wyeth, president of the club. She expressed the hope the fund would be augmented from other sources.

Six years ago Mr. Braman wrote, "I am much impressed that many Americans do not appreciate the value to us and to our posterity of the American Constitution, the necessity for its preservation, or the benefits that would accrue to society from a knowledge of this document and its historical background."

Mrs. Braman, recently coming across this paper of her husband's, felt impelled to make an award to perpetuate his views.

Woman Physician and Woman Dentist Say Their Sex Does Not Bar Complete Success in Their Professional Work; Also Can Be Genuine Homemakers

Love of Work Needed to Advance in Field of Dentistry.

THE mention of women dentists, even today, causes exclamations of surprise. The sight of big, shiny dental chairs and fine instruments has inspired few women to dedicate their lives to mending molars. Yet, according to a recent survey conducted by the women's Bureau of the Department of Labor, dentistry is one of the most profitable professions open to women.

"Only those women who intend to make dentistry their lifework should go into it," said Dr. Mildred Dickerson, Washington dentist, yesterday. "The training is long, difficult and expensive. A person has to love the work before she can be successful in it."

"But I do feel it is an excellent profession for women to go into. At present there are only two thousand women dentists in America, but all of those are doing well."

The woman who is considering dentistry as a profession should check up on herself, and see if she has the necessary qualifications, Dr. Dickerson believes.

"A dentist should be a person of superior intelligence," she said. "For the course she studies requires concentration and skilled knowledge. She should also possess excellent health, as the work requires physical stamina. The person who enters dentistry should be one who is gifted in working with her hands, and she should possess perfect nervous control.

In some ways women have the advantage over men when it comes to dentistry, says Dr. Dickerson.

"Dentists must have a sense of the esthetic," she explained, "and this is usually more pronounced in women than in men. However, I don't think the matter of sex should enter into it. People should choose their dentists because they are good dentists, not because they are men or women."

It is quite possible to have a successful career as a dentist and have a happy married life at the same time, according to Dr. Dickerson.

"Women have been practicing dentistry since 1870," she said, "and many of the most successful women dentists have been married."

THE DENTAL PROFESSION is one of the few offering advancement to women, yet the training is long, difficult and expensive, warns Dr. Mildred Dickerson, above. "One must love the work to be successful," she says.

Harris & Ewing.

Medicine Is Lucrative Profession for Women Nowadays.

WHEN the Woman's Bureau of the Department of Labor announced a few days ago after a Nation-wide survey that medicine is one of the most lucrative professions for women today, most persons were surprised. So quietly have women invaded the medical field in the last decade, few laymen were aware of the increasing number of successful women physicians.

"I suppose it's because we stay in the background and refuse to talk about ourselves," said Dr. Elizabeth Kittredge, new president of the Women's Medical Association of the District, yesterday. "I believe women doctors are a little more careful than men in observing the ethics of the medical profession which forbid physicians talking about their work for publication. That's why woman's opportunities in medicine are not generally known."

Dr. Kittredge, in private life Mrs. H. L. Whittemore, and the mother of a small boy and girl, seconded the statement of the Woman's Bureau concerning openings for women physicians.

"If a woman doctor takes her work seriously, I think she is bound to succeed. Her sex is not a handicap, as many believe," said the president of the Woman's Medical Association.

Surgery, however, is still ruled for the most part by men.

"I don't know of any surgeons among the 40 women doctors in Washington, although there are several who assist in surgical cases," said Dr. Kittredge. She added she saw no reason why women shouldn't be successful surgeons, provided they had some natural aptitude for the work.

Combining a medical practice with the rearing of two small children is all a matter of budgeting one's time, according to this woman physician.

"Other women play bridge, go to shows, and rear children. I take care of my patients and rear my children. It amounts to the same things," declared Dr. Kittredge.

Psychiatry Not A Parlor Toy, Says Dr. Kirby

Tells Association That Mental Healing Grows More Scientific.

NEW YORK, May 29 (AP).—A warning against the use of psychiatry as a "remunerative way of entertaining suburban ladies" or as a toy for parlor intellectuals was given the American Psychiatric Association today by its president, Dr. George H. Kirby.

"The parlor psychologist, like the parlor socialist, has had his day," Dr. Kirby quoted from a medical publication in addressing the association's convention.

"Lecturers and writers who disguise the pill of serious facts with a spicy coating of sensationalism must give way to qualified psychiatrists to whom psychopathology is a scientific study rather than a remunerative way of entertaining suburban ladies."

Mental Healing Oldest.

Mental healing, Dr. Kirby said, is without doubt the oldest therapeutic measure used by mankind.

"But what is of vastly more importance to us," he added, "is the fact that mental healing is now, in our age, being gradually divested of its supernatural and mysterious aspects; its basic truths and principles are being slowly unfolded, with the result that psychotherapy is being brought gradually into the domain of scientific medicine. * * *

"We have witnessed in recent years an ever-increasing invasion of the field of psychotherapy by lay analysts, psychologists with a smattering of analytic knowledge, social service workers who have taken a course in analysis, and various other persons poorly equipped and untrained yet confident that they were qualified for the serious and difficult task of attempting to treat sick persons by analytic methods.

Treated as Pastime.

"In certain circles of the intelligentsia, psychoanalysis is treated as a pastime or plaything * * *."

Dr. Bernard Sachs, president of the New York Academy of Medicine, also told the association he saw danger ahead "in the fact that some of you are inclined to link yourselves too closely with the interesting, but unproven hypothesis of a single school—psychoanalysis."

He pleaded for closer relationship between neurology and psychiatry in the interest of mutual progress.

Eleanor Snodgrass Wins Yard Award

Six-Year-Old Girl Gets Prize at Art Show.

ELEANOR SNODGRASS, 6-year-old daughter of Mrs. Ruth H. Snodgrass, 3706 Thirteenth street northwest, won first award in the children's class between the ages of 6 and 10 years in the Yard School of Art's annual exhibition yesterday afternoon, at 2100 Bancroft place.

Alan Rosenthal received the second prize, Verna Patrick, first honorable mention, and Eleanor Snodgrass, second honorable mention.

In the class for children from 11 to 15 years Elizabeth Fish, daughter of Representative Hamilton Fish, of New York, took the first award for her "Street Scene." Isabel Marie Case and Dorothy Jones tied for second award. Eleanor Hempstone received first honorable mention; Louise Vance, second mention, and Josephine Henderson, third mention.

Housewife's Confidence Inspires Most Buying

Miami, Fla., May 29 (AP).—Confidence in the manufacturer and "inspiration" are the chief factors that determine the average housewife in her purchases.

That is the belief of Mrs. Christine Fredericks, director of a testing laboratory for household products at Greenlaw, Long Island. She was one of the chief speakers today before the Southeastern Advertising and Publicity Conference here.

The mechanical operation or construction of a commodity, its probable life of usefulness and other similar data are not important to the woman buyer, Mrs. Fredericks said, because the woman places her confidence in the maker.

Streamlined, Pastel-Shade Bathtubs Here

A SPIRIT of carnival gaiety prevails at the Master Plumbers' Exhibit now being held at the Washington Auditorium. Bright smiles wreathe the faces of the attending salesmen, who, attired in their convention-best, openly and joyously swing canes and proudly display their wares to prospective customers.

They are rivaled in splendor only by the plumbing fixtures, which, having long ago discarded their drab coats, are even more colorful than usual this spring. They are blossoming out in delicate pastels and streamline models.

All this gaiety is contagious and the spectators soon get into the spirit of the occasion. Even the most dignified lose their inhibitions, and yesterday a scholarly-looking man, the prostestations of his middle-aged, eminently respectable wife unheeded, hoisted himself into the latest bathtub with admirable nonchalance.

There is something about those bathtubs that arouses the pioneering spirit and there were few moments during the morning when they were not occupied. The tubs are square, the tub itself being placed at an angle within the unit, and the space at the sides forming two seats. By first sitting on one of these, the affable salesman explained, the prospective bather can ease himself into the tub without the effort of getting in all at once. Here he can sit, and splash his feet contentedly, lather, and feel a shower trickle gently down his back. When time comes for the final immersion, he can slide in without undue effort.

But the combination of dressing table and lavatory, caught the eyes of the women spectators. At first glance the true nature of the dressing table is not evident. It looks like a modernistic dressing table with unusually beautiful fixtures.

Closer examination reveals that the table is made of metal, the decorative knobs on the center drawer are water faucets and the rest of the plumbing is artfully concealed. Plugs for attaching curlers are built in, and lighting fixtures also are provided. These dressing tables have matching chairs covered in waterproof fabric, with chromium base. The result is a luxurious bathroom.

Stainless steel, chromium, and nickel are the newest models in kitchen sinks. Economy and beauty of line characterizes these sinks, and the demonstrators assure onlookers that they will not scratch or require polishing.

Defense of Nation Seen Child's Educational Need

National President of Daughter of Union Veterans of the Civil War Calls for Widespread Teaching of Patriotism.

DESPITE youth movements, college pacifists and movements for juvenile self-expression, Mrs. Dorothy Houghton, of Wichita, Kans., National president of the Daughters of Union Veterans of the Civil War, maintains firmly that boys and girls of today should be taught the maxim: "My country, right or wrong, but still my country."

Mrs. Houghton, who is visiting at the Mayflower, came to Washington to attend the dedication of the new National headquarters of Union Veterans, at Eighteenth street and Massachusetts avenue.

The teaching of patriotism to the youth of the land is necessary for the preservation of National integrity, Mrs. Houghton insists. She particularly believes that the outward forms of patriotism such as paying honor to the flag, learning and singing National anthems, and showing respect to National heroes, past and present, make an impression in childish minds that is ineradicable. And out of such impressions, she holds, are developed good citizens of the future.

Does Not Promote War.

"It is ridiculous to say that the teaching of patriotism to children promotes war," said Mrs. Houghton. "Children are not the ones who decide whether we will have war. The legislators do that. And when our Nation's leaders think war is necessary, our citizens should be ready to fight. Certainly our legislators would not enter war without good cause."

The Nation particularly has a right to demand that its teachers be loyal American citizens, Mrs. Houghton believes.

"It is most important," she said, "that the men and women who are now training the next generation of American citizens should themselves be wholly loyal and patriotic. The future safety and progress of our Republic require this."

Mrs. Houghton deplores what she calls the "present propaganda" against war in schools and organizations. She blames this propaganda for pacifist movements in colleges and elsewhere.

Opposed to Alliance.

"Our organization is firmly opposed to entering the World Court, the League of Nations or any such alliances," said Mrs. Houghton. "We should abide by the fundamental principles of the Constitution, which are just as applicable today as when the document was written. We are much more likely to be involved in European wars if we enter any of these societies."

Adequate National defense is the greatest barrier to war, Mrs. Houghton stated, explaining the militant attitude of her organization.

"If we had had an army and navy that commanded the respect of other nations we would never have entered the last war," she said with conviction. "We do not want to encourage war, but we want to be able to defend our country if it is necessary."

THE TEACHING OF PATRIOTISM to the youth of the land is necessary for the preservation of National integrity, in the opinion of Mrs. Dorothy Houghton, above. She is National President of the Daughters of Union Veterans of the Civil War.

Linen Clothes For All Hours Gaining Favor

Even Bathing Suits Are Forsaking Wool and Rubber.

THE woman of fashion this summer may be well dressed in linen every hour of the day and evening. At the beach, on the streets, at luncheon or at the dance, linen dresses are being worn and admired.

While many tailored linens are fashioned by the one-color formula, the latest style trend is toward contrasts featuring white or natural with dark colors. The most popular combinations are white or natural with navy and brown or occasionally black.

Sport togs that go linen are often boucles in two colors. For linen has invaded the knitted field with amazing success. The lavender and green combination is being featured in many shops, and has found such great favor that dresses of this type threaten to supplant cotton boucles.

Using Embroidery.

Embroidered effects are also being used in linens. Scatterings of multicolored dots on suiting and dress weight linens are popular. This type of material is particularly suitable for topcoats of swagger or straight box silhouettes.

Even bathing suits are forsaking wool and rubber for linen. Made of the heavier but smooth surface type of linen, bathing suits are appearing in both the white and natural suiting.

Beach pajamas are particularly distinctive when they are fashioned of rose linen suiting trimmed with brown chintz.

Misses' fashions are favoring natural crash linen as it is particularly suitable for the swagger style of coat. Plaid crash and striped linen meshes are attracting wide attention at resorts. Pin stripes, however, are used more frequently in the porous weaves designed to revive interest in linen meshes. One type is the woven spot porous weave with designs carried out in gay colors against a natural linen background.

All Shades for Afternoon.

Virtually every shade on the color wheel is being used in linen afternoon dresses. Blues—ranging from Copenhagen and Navy to powdery casts—still lead in favor. Pink and peach are gaining popularity, yellow is coming to the fore ground, and cherry red and beetroot are in increasing demand.

Informal evening wear leans toward tablecloth linen. Boldly colored plaids, checks and stripes are recommended by leading fashionists for both luncheon and evening dresses. Colors popular for plaid dresses of this type are yellow, white and black or yellow, navy and red in alternate lines.

Tablecloth linen is also attaining success in sport jackets from the short to the three-quarter length style.

Although there are linen dresses for every occasion, there is in general little choice in weaves. Patterned novelties and individual color schemes, however, lend variety and result in strikingly beautiful apparel.

Phone, Radio Show One's Personality

CAMBRIDGE, Mass., May 29 (Spl.).—When using the telephone, be careful that a psychologist is not at the other end. Otherwise you may be making a Lady Godiva of your personality.

Experiments at Harvard University have shown that speakers over the telephone or the radio reveal more of their personalities than they suspect. Through voices, say the psychologists, inner qualities can be more correctly judged than from physical appearance or other outward sign. And voices transmitted over the radio or telephone are especially revealing as the other agencies for expressing personality are lacking and thus all the emphasis is placed on the voice.

The experimentes were conducted by university psychologists at their psychological laboratory and at a radio station in Boston.

While the tests emphasized the extent of personality expression over telephone and radio, yet they failed to reveal that any particular traits showed up consistently in normal speaking voices or that certain types of persons were always to be recognized by their voices.

Miss Peelle Selects June 30 for Wedding

Miss Elizabeth Peelle, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Stanton Canfield Peelle, of Chevy Chase, Md., has selected June 30 as the date for her wedding to Mr. Armistead Lloyd Boothe, son of Mr. and Mrs. Gardner Lloyd Boothe, of Alexandria, Va.

The ceremony will be performed at noon by the Rev. H. H. Sterrett in All Souls' Episcopal Church. The bride's attendants and the ushers have not yet been named.

War Caused by Women, Says Maj. Gen. Hapgood

Memphis, Tenn.—What is the cause of war?

"Women," says Maj. Gen. Johnson Hapgood of Fort Sam Houston.

"The lipstick does more to provoke war than the big stick," he avers.

"In the last analysis, men fight for their women, and there will be wars as long as there are women worth fighting for."

Date Recalls Bloomer Fad And Advocate

SENECA FALLS, N. Y., May 29 (AP).—The memory of a Seneca Falls housewife was recalled throughout America today—and the "bloomers" she advocated back in 1851.

This week feminists observe the 116th anniversary of the birth of Amelia Bloomer, who started the bloomer fad and was one of the Nation's leading champions of women's rights.

She was born at Homer, N. Y., May 27, 1818, and became a pioneer reformer in the feminist movement soon after she married a young journalist and came to live in this village.

First presenting her views in her husband's newspaper, she gained National recognition after the first women's rights convention was held here, through her publication of The Lily.

In 1851, when The Lily was six years old, Mrs. Bloomer published her sensational editorial urging adoption in America of the Oriental-styled costume that was given her name.

Mr. and Mrs. Hewes Give Last of Dinner Series

Mr. and Mrs. Clarence Hewes entertained at the last of the series of dinners which they have given this season at their home on Massachusetts avenue.

Mr. and Mrs. Hewes will leave today by motor for New York, where they will spend some time at their country home near Larchmont. Mr. Hewes will sail for Europe on June 9, and Mrs. Hewes will join him there later. They will reopen their house in Washington about November 15.

Five Women's Colleges Now Permit Students to Marry

THE mixing of matrimony with higher algebra is becoming a general educational trend, a survey of women's colleges has revealed.

Recently Vassar College announced that students might marry and continue their courses. This was hailed as an innovation in feminine education. Now it appears that at least five other leading colleges for women are equally liberal in respect to student matrimony.

Student marriages are permitted at Smith, Mount Holyoke Radcliffe, Bryn Mawr and Barnard Colleges. However, the marriages must not be secret and must be subject to certain regulations.

Barnard College has a ruling to the effect that if the husband lives in the vicinity of the college the wife shall not live in the dormitory. Most of the married students occupy apartments in New York.

Smith College at Northampton, Mass., for several years has permitted its students to marry provided they make arrangements satisfactory to the administration. Students contemplating marriage are supposed to consult with the warden of the college and make arrangements for pursuing their courses.

Mount Holyoke College at South Hadley, Mass., does not encourage student marriages, but students who marry with the consent of their parents may complete their college courses and live in the residence halls. The present senior class has three married members.

Radcliffe College at Cambridge has no rule forbidding student marriages, but students are requested not to be married secretly. Married students are allowed to live in the dormitories.

Bryn Mawr College, at Byrn Mawr, Pa., considers each student marriage as an individual case. Heretofore undergraduate students who married were permitted to continue their work as nonresident students.

Miss Robertson To Marry June 16

Mr. and Mrs. Robert Harlan Robertson, of Pocomoke City, Md., have issued invitations for the marriage of their daughter, Miss Annie Kerns Robertson, to Mr. Sylvester T. Schicktanz, of Washington, on June 16, at 1 o'clock at the Pitts Creek Presbyterian Church, in Pocomoke City.

Miss Robertson is a graduate of the Sargent School of Physical Education and is a member of the faculty of Sidwells' Friends School in Washington. Mr. Schicktanz is a graduate of the University of Illinois and a member of Alpha Chi Sigma. He is employed at the National Bureau of Standards in Washington.

Massage Vital In Proper Care Of One's Face

New, Ingenious Device Will Do the Work Efficiently.

By Ruth Anne Davis.

INGENIOUS device is a mild term for the new massagette. It does all that the fingers can do—and more.

First of all, there's a handle, and at the end of this a little metal ball that fits into a sort of container. When ball is taken out a dab of face cream is placed in the container and the ball replaced. As it is rubbed over the face it turns over and over and the cream is spread round and about. Another ball that comes with it should be kept in ice water, and after the cream message, should be inserted, and rubbed over the face as a refreshener.

A great many women like to massage their faces with ice either in the morning or at night. They will find this new arrangement no end of a convenience. It supplies the proper chill, is much easier to use, and proves a real rub down.

Unless the fingers have been trained in the art of massaging they are not likely to be adept in the way of facials. These mechanical balls, however, do a constructive job of covering the entire surface in the most scientific way.

Incidental Bags Needed.

Inasmuch as summer is a time of many frocks—thanks to their gloriously low prices—it should also be a time of many purses. One good steady white purse is always grand to fall back on, but the incidental bags to match the frocks are always a treat to carry.

An F street shop which makes a speciality of many things has outdone itself this season with these small inexpensive purses. They call them "occasional bags." There are small piques, seersuckers, linens, silk crepes, kids, in plain colors, stripes, checks, and prints.

For the light summer cotton cocktail frocks, some of the solid whites, in pouch shape with zipper tops are particularly adapted. It's a matter of taste, however, so drop by and take your pick.

A New Bacchus.

Rockwell Kent, the artist-author, has been busy of late finding out things about Bacchus. Or more properly, old prints of Bacchus. Having been asked to create a decorative placque for a wine bottle stand and cooler, he decided on Bacchus as the best representative and model for the polite art of drinking. But there were figures and figures of this popular mythical person, and it took some time to decide. So between the old and the new ideas he created one that truly backs up his reputation as an artist.

It may be seen on the bright and shining chrome cooler and wine bottle stand, on sale, separately or together, in a downtown store.

Eau de Cologne for Summer.

In line with one's thoughts of summer toiletries—the new triflacon set, a bouquet of colognes. It contains three two ounce bottles of some ever popular eau de cologne, known the world over for the daintiness of its scent. Arranged triangularly, the bottles stand upright in a cylindrical shaped box, available in three pastel shades—salmon pink, pale green, and soft beige. The artistry of the set is furthered by the slight black trim.

The eau de cologne is a year-round preparation. Hot weather, however, brings it doubly to the fore, and makes it especially desirable.

Considered as a gift the set is sure to please because of its usefulness and because it's different. Hundreds already have found it an especially nice way of saying "bon voyage." It's ideally suited for bridge prizes, or as a compliment to one's hostess. On the other hand, the hostess would be making a gracious gesture by offering this choice of bouquets for the pleasure of her house guests.

Something for the Bride.

The gift for the June bride is uppermost in many minds. In answer to numerous inquiries an aristocrat in the world of cosmetics suggests a lipstick-compact-perfume set, which he designed especially for the June wedding. However, it is equally appropriate for the bridesmaid, or the sweet girl graduate.

A stunning white box, embossed in one corner with a coat of arms, contains a large white enamel compact patterned after perfection, an automatic lipstick that is proof against kisses, and a white bottle of exquisite perfume.

Dotted organdy blouses are designed to give a colorful, perky touch to plain skirts, both light and dark.

Frilled as they are around the neck and gathered in with elastic around the waist, they are bound to both fit and flatter.

Dignified Shakers.

Plain sterling silver salts and peppers represent the acme of conservatism. They blend into any table scheme and represent no end of utility. A set of six for $1.95 is an ideal shower gift for the June bride.

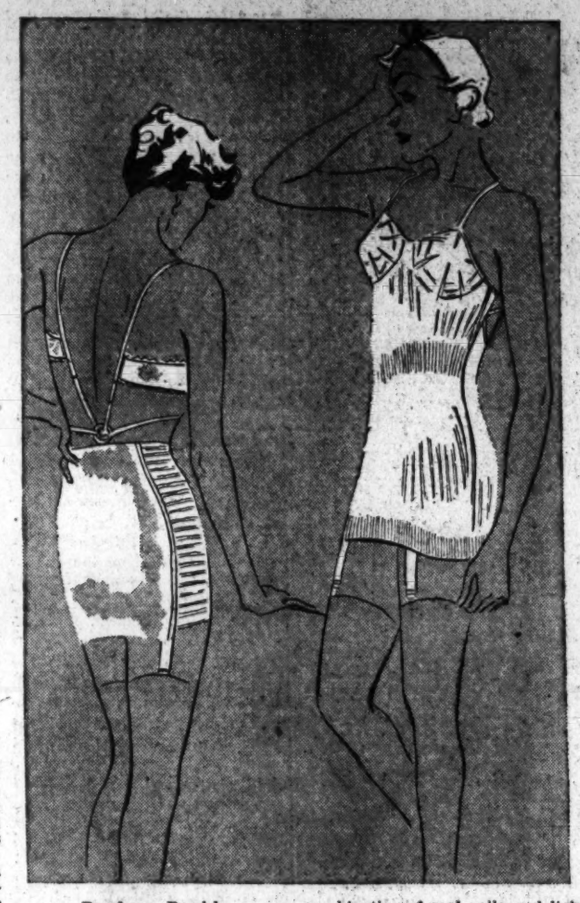
Weight Cut to Minimum In New Summer Corsets

Some Made of Nets and Voiles, Scale Only Two Ounces; Newest Fashion Is to Have Color Same as That of Dress.



By Amos Parrish.

NEW YORK, May 30.—So you "can't bear to wear a corset in hot weather?" Then we'll wager you haven't heard that modern summer corsets average only around five ounces in weight and that many of them are ventilated so the air fairly pours through them.

Some of the new corsets weigh as little as two ounces. (Imagine! Only an eighth of a pound.) Those are the ones of nets and voiles.

Besides these there are linens, crepes, broadcloths — all light weight and cool — and ever-so-thin Lastex garments.

White or Pastels.

You select these in white to wear under summer's fashionable white dresses; in flesh for use with anything but white. Or, if you want to do the newest thing, you choose a yellow one to wear under a yellow dress, a blue to wear with blue, green for green and pink for pink. For some of these garments are made in all those pastels.

Because they are made of light materials which are not constricting, they leave you free for action. Yet they are designed and cut to give the figure a certain amount of control. You're sure it won't go out of bounds when you change from your heavier garment into one of these lighter ones.

You may take your choice of girdles or all-in-one combinations . . . of fastenless garments (the kind you step into) or of garments with slide fasteners (another warm weather comfort feature . . . quick and easy to fasten).

Voile and Elastic.

One of the summer girdles, a combination of cool voile and light elastic, is shown on the figure at the left. With it is worn a new bandeau with a clever ring attachment which hooks onto the girdle and keeps the low-back lines of the bandeau intact. Securely anchored by the ring, the straps can not slip and show when worn with a low-cut day or evening dress.

(Copyright, 1934.)

Foundation garments of the types described may be found in all the better class women's shops, lingerie shops and department stores.

What Today Means

"Gemini."

If May 30 is your birthday, the best hours for you on this date are from 9:15 to 11:15 a. m., from 3:15 to 5:15 p. m. and from 8:15 to 10:15 p. m. The danger periods are from 6:15 to 8:15 a. m., from 12:15 to 2:15 p. m. and from 5:15 to 7:15 p. m.

If a woman and born on May 30, there are apparently issues that may arise in a comparatively short time that may be the contributing cause for a great deal of good fortune. Your artistic nature responds best to luxurious surroundings, so that a career which would bring you into close contact with beautiful things might offer great opportunity for your development. Interior decorating, the theater, or a very exclusive type of shop, specializing in those things that appeal to women of discernment, or a well appointed office of a corporation, employing high-caliber men and women, are places where you might do best, if marriage does not save you from the necessity of making a living.

The child born on May 30, just as soon as it is old enough to start training, must be taught never to start anything that it is not just as ready to finish. It must learn it has to complete whatever it undertakes to do. It must also be made to understand the evil of being wasteful. If children, whose natal day this is, are instructed in the temperance of not pushing aside the thing they have to do for something else and how essential orderliness is, they will have, as a rule, few other undesirable traits to be corrected.

The man born on May 30 generally is gifted with an unusual amount of ability to originate new ideas. If this is your birth anniversary, your creative ability requires only a fixity of purpose, and a concentration on the essential details for you to be most successful. Avoid falling into the habit of expecting others to have the ability to carry out your thoughts. Your monetary success will depend largely upon the amount of individual effort exerted. May 30 is a day requiring energetic effort to be made for satisfactory results.

CAPITAL KITCHEN

Frosted Cake Is Best for Picnic; Here's How to Prevent Trouble.

By Susan Mills.

IF YOU take a cake with you when you go picnicking you'll want one of these lovely frosted ones, of course. Unfrosted cakes are rather bourgeois.

But how to keep the frosting from becoming messy? It's fun to remove it from the waxed paper with an eager finger, but better if it remains on the cake where it belongs.

Why not take the frosting along and put it on the cake on the picnic grounds?

Nut Loaf Cake.

(One egg.)

2 cups sifted cake flour.
2 teaspoons combination baking powder.
¼ teaspoon salt.
4 tablespoons butter or other shortening.
1 cup sugar
1 egg unbeaten
1 cup nut meats, chopped
⅔ cup milk
1 teaspoon vanilla

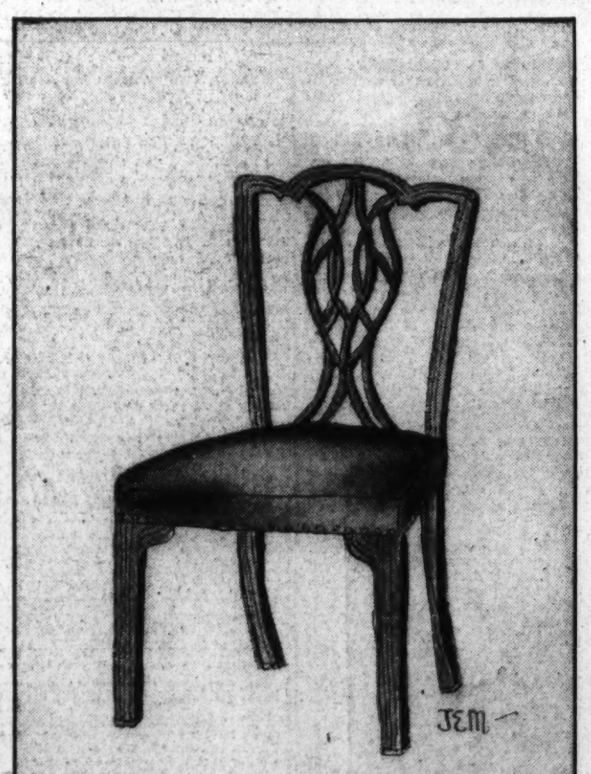
Sift flour once, measure, add baking powder and salt, and sift together three times. Cream butter thoroughly, add sugar gradually, and cream together until light and fluffy. Add egg and beat very thoroughly. Add nuts. Add flour, alternately with milk, a small amount at a time, beating after each addition until smooth. Add vanilla. Bake in greased pan, in moderate oven (350 degrees Fahrenheit) 50 minutes, or until done. Serve plain, or spread Chocolate Wonder Frosting thickly on top of cake.

Chocolate Wonder Frosting.

3 ounces (1 package) cream cheese
3 to 4 tablespoons milk
2 cups sifted confectioners' sugar
2 squares unsweetened chocolate, melted
Dash of salt

Soften cream cheese with milk. Add sugar, one cup at a time, blending after each addition. Add chocolate and salt and beat until smooth. Makes enough frosting to cover tops of two 9-inch layers, or top and sides of 8x8x2-inch cake, or about two dozen cup cakes. (This frosting, when tightly covered, may be kept in refrigerator several days before using.)

Chippendale Interpreted 1700s In Terms of Fine Furniture



By Jo Ellen Maxson.

THOMAS CHIPPENDALE, the son of a cabinet maker and wood carver, with an inheritance of artistic ability, love of fine furniture and remarkable craftsmanship, was the first furniture designer to attach a name to his style.

Although many of Chippendale's furniture designs were original, he was particularly skilled in adapting ideas from other periods and other countries. Even an Oriental influence is felt in some of his work which became known as Chinese Chippendale. This, by the way, is being carried over into contemporary styles and is re-named Chinese modern.

During the 18th century, Chippendale's time, there was a marked growth in interest in the interiors of homes. They became more and more like the English homes that we know today. There was a dignity and serenity in these houses as well as cheer and intimacy.

Perhaps the most outstanding characteristic of the Chippendale furniture is the claw and ball foot. This term is self-explanatory. The arms of the chairs were curved and flaring at the ends. The chair backs have always been noted for their beauty of line and exquisite fret work and carving. They were inclined to be rather square in shape with gracefully curving tops.

Mahogany was the favorite wood chosen by Chippendale to express his conception of perfection in form, line and ornament. And he was discriminating in his choice of mahogany.

He made practically all types of furniture; among the newer pieces developed by him were the sideboard and bookcases.

Chippendale will always be supreme in the particular era of interior decoration and furniture design which he interpreted so well. His furniture was not only beautiful. It was also structurally sound, and has remained so down through the years. Thomas Chippendale died in 1779 after enjoying a supremacy of over 30 years.

White Collar Women Facing Difficult Task

Unemployed Are Suffering Maladjustments, Survey Shows.

NEW YORK, May 29 (Spl.).—The white collar woman out of work the last few years has suffered emotional maladjustments that now seriously handicap her in undertaking new activities.

This is revealed in a report of the psychiatric consulting service of the Emergency Work Bureau here. The report states that the depression has developed "marked behavior peculiarities" in women who have been out of work and has in some cases rendered them unfit for future employment unless they go through a period of mental and physical rehabilitation.

The survey showed that most white collar women out of work had preferred to go hungry rather than work at uncongenial tasks and that most of such workers were far happier and more efficient if they were given work that really taxed their ability to the utmost.

Many emotional maladjustments, the report shows, were brought to focus in the third year of the depression, when resources gave out and the last tenuous jobs were exhausted for women.

The sensitiveness of the white collar woman toward accepting aid from social relief agencies has made the handling of her problem a particularly delicate one, the report brings out.

The consulting service of the Emergency Work Bureau was founded in the spring of 1933, its purpose being to maintain on a reasonably high level the mental health and morale of single unemployed women in the white collar and professional class.

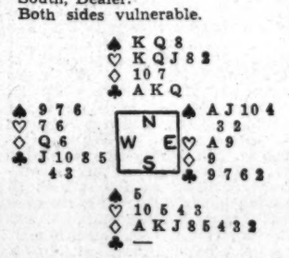
Culbertson on Bridge

1060.
Safeguarding Slams.

Such a great majority of Bridge players now use the Four-Five Notrump Convention as an insurance of bidding makable Slams and refusing to bid Slams which can not be made, that it is comparatively rare to see players reach after a Slam without the Aces necessary to produce it.

The other day, however, watching a Rubber game at Crockford's Club, New York, I saw a partnership reach an unmakable Slam because the partners thought they needed no such crutch as the Four-Five Notrump Convention upon which to lean. They felt that their judgment of card values was too accurate to require any system except their own common sense. The result convinced them of the contrary.

South, Dealer.
Both sides vulnerable.



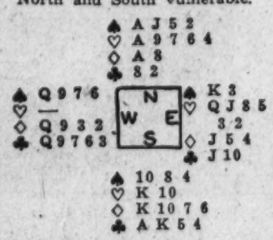
The bidding: (Figures after bids refer to numbered explanatory paragraphs.)

South	West	North	East
Pass (1)	Pass	1♡ (2)	1♠
2◇ (3)	Pass	3♡ (4)	Pass
5♡ (5)	Pass	6♡ (6)	Pass (7)
Pass	Pass

1—An alternative would be a Preemptive bid in diamonds.
2—North has a very fine hand. Of course, the choice of his Opening bid is obvious.
3—There is a strong temptation for South to take stronger action with his hand in view of his great freak and fit with his partner's suit. However, he decides to await developments. His bid, after an opposing Overcall, practically assures another bid from North.
4—A fully justified Rebid.
5—South's hand is very strong distributionally and certainly suggests a Slam. However, the void in clubs indicates a probable duplication of values.
6—Even though his partner has invited a Slam, North should not bid it. If South were void of spades he would have shown that fact rather than bid five hearts. It is almost impossible that he holds both the diamond Ace-King and the Ace of spades, and it is out of the question that he holds all three Aces not in North's hand. The bid of five hearts should be passed.
7—While East, on the bidding, appears to have a reasonably safe Penalty Double, it would be rather pointless as, at best, a set of one trick is indicated, and the gain would be only 100 points, whereas there is a slight chance on the bidding that North is void of spades and that the contract can be made, in which case, if East doubles, North will probable redouble.

Tomorrow's Hand.

North, Dealer.
North and South vulnerable.



The hand will be discussed in tomorrow's article.

Social Life Undergoes Big Change

TORONTO, May 29 (AP).—"A tremendous social change is taking place in the world today," said David C. Adie, commissioner of special welfare for New York State, who is in Toronto today to address the Junior League convention.

"A more communal mode of living is coming into being," he remarked in an interview. "In the past shame and loss of social status were involved in taking relief. But now there are 12,000,000 unemployed in the United States alone, one out of every eight being on relief. In consequence, people expect and accept relief as a right and without suffering loss of self-respect.

"All through the world the old order is gradually passing. The social differences that once separated society have largely vanished. People are gradually merging toward a common level. The Government seems faced with the choice between fascism and an ever-widening democracy. Personally I prefer the latter."

The birth of new political parties, such as the Cooperative Commonwealth Federation, Canada, was explained by Adie as an expression of the people's desire for social change.

"There will be far more volunteer workers in the public field," he forecast, "and there will be a shift toward internationalism."

How to Keep Well

By Dr. W. A. Evans.

How to Grow Wool.

Our efforts to prevent premature baldness are pitiful, not only because they are so ineffective, but because they show what a lot of saps we are. The hair program of a man is generally settled when he is born and nothing he may later do will materially alter it. We inherit our hair. Children have curly or straight hair, fine or coarse, black or brown, as determined by laws of inheritance. Furthermore, we inherit our baldness program. When we are born it is settled just about when the hair will begin to fall out faster than it is renewed, and just about what will be the patterns of our bald spots.

According to inheritance laws, baldness is a sex-linked characteristic. The law applies to men, but not to women. However, the daughter of a man whose baldness was of a certain pattern and appeared at a certain age is liable to bear sons who will have a hair pattern that follows the type of the grandfather.

Babies vary with respect to the amount of hair with which they come into the world. From the standpoint of the baby the hair at birth is not a matter of great consequence, since it soon wears away and is often replaced by a new head cast of a different pattern as to color, curliness and other qualities.

In later life the details of the hair program may be somewhat modified by the care given the scalp or the lack of it. The experience of Negroes in removing kinks has shown that much washing, greasing and brushing suffices not only to change the shape of the hair shaft and prevent close curling, but also greatly improves the nutrition and the quality of the hair. Infections of the scalp by animal and vegetable parasites is an accident which has some effect on the hair program. So are certain scalp diseases that are not due to infections.

The application of hair tonics is useless and wasteful except as they lead indirectly to better scalp hygiene through more cleaning and brushing. The use of hair foods in ordinary ointment form is silly. The possibilities of absorption by the skin are too small for any help from that source.

Generally speaking, it is true that it is decreed when we are born just about when we will become bald, how much, and according to what pattern. But there are some physiologic discoveries that may change this opinion. They come from comparative anatomy, physiology and biology. In the main they relate to sheep.

The Talking Sparrow Murders

BY DARWIN TEILHET

The Story So Far.

"A sparrow down there spoke to me. It said distinctly, "Help! I'm caught!" With these strange words, Kohlmann, the big industrialist, fell, shot, at Tatson's feet as he was crossing a Heidelberg street. Tatson was an American engineer, in a hurry to get home to a job which wouldn't wait. He was arrested, and then released on parole through the efforts of Carlson, his business friend at the plant not far from Heidelberg. But instead of proving his innocence, Tatson seemed every day to become more involved in Kohlmann's murder. In fact, many people were now involved in its web; Spaiger, accountant at the bank, also murdered, leaving behind a shortage in his accounts; Geigen, who was buying the plant, and his fiancee, Elaine Edrich, who had been Kohlmann's ward; Taubek, the Nazi leader, who had tried to kill Tatson; Walther Kohlmann, who was reported away on business and didn't come home even for his father's funeral; the mysterious La Roc, with his many letters from brokers; charming, half-Jewish Mischa Dryshenzoff, fleeing from Nazi brutalities, yet apparently working with a Nazi, and finally, Carlson, of the plant, always offering to assist Tatson.

Mischa, whose fortunes seemed somehow linked to those of Tatson, helped him to escape from Taubek, the two fleeing to the Dolphin Inn. There Tatson left her, to seek the help from the police, only to discover that the Dolphin was Taubek's stronghold. In terror he rushed back to it and found a gory scene. Taubek, the inn-keeper and the cook were dead. Mischa had disappeared. Kresch, chief of police, learned that a man had used the telephone at a nearby farmhouse just before the murder. A woman had heard him give his name. Something like the name of the violin, she had said.

Now let Tatson himself go on with the story:

"A VIOLIN?" The word for violin in German is "geige;" the woman had remembered well enough.

Kresch thanked her.

It was an hour and a quarter by the slow Bummelzug from Neuostheiw to Heidelberg. It took Kresch 16 minutes to drive the distance. We stopped at the Sopheinstrasse. "You can get out here," he said in his mushy, unhurried way. "You will meet me, please, at the Polizeiamt at 1. At 1 exactly."

"But—what about Geigen?"

"If Herr Geigen is in Heidelberg we are going to see him. If he isn't in Heidelberg—we will find him. At 1, Herr Tat-zohn. And if Fraulein Dryshenzoff can be found we shall find her, too."

I went directly to the Europaischerhof. There was a note for me from Carlson:

"I waited until 10 and then called up the Polizeiamt. They said you had gone to Mannheim with Kresch. Telephone me if you get back before noon, otherwise I shall telephone the Stuttgart consul and go to Mannheim. You can reach me at the plant."

"Hello, why didn't you call sooner?" asked Carlson when I was put through to him.

And as soon as he learned what had happened he made no reproaches, no allusions to my blasted theories, but said, "I have my Bugatti here and I'll drive right in. Meet me at the hotel in ten minutes and we'll have lunch together. And listen, Bill, don't get so discouraged I'll get you back to the States in time for your job."

Cupid Enters Picture.

He hung up before I could explain that it wasn't the job any more—it was Mischa.

We had lunch at his special table on the east side of the big dining room.

"I worried like the devil about you," he said. "I called the Polizeiamt. They said you had gone with Kresch. I thought he might have pulled you along with him. He shouldn't have done it, Bill. It could have been dangerous for you."

"All I wanted was to get back to Mischa."

He put down his fork. "Listen, Bill" —— and he hesitated—"she didn't—listen, it's none of my business. I'm damn near 20 years older than you and what you do is your own business and if I can help you—why, fine." He swirled the white Moselle in his glass and drank it slowly. "What I'm trying to say is—well, what' her name?—Kohlmann's ward is all right. But this other girl—well, you're not in love with her, are you?"

"No, of course not. Only I don't want anything to happen to her. It's partly my fault."

"That's different." He started eating again.

"You think Mischa killed Taubek?"

Mischa Must Be Found.

"How should I know? Cigarette? Here's my lighter. Suppose she did kill Taubek? I'd say she did a good job and I hope she gets away. But I don't want you mixed up in it. It's important for you to escape despite my promise to Kresch. And after you leave, I can square myself with Kresch somehow."

"I'm not leaving until Mischa's found."

"Youre not? You realize what day this is?"

"Thursday."

"And you have to be out of Heidelberg by next Tuesday."

"Not a chance. Kresch won't let me go."

"Bill, if Geigen admits he killed Kohlmann or Taubek—good. You're free to clear out. If Geigen didn't do the killing, and I'm damned if I can imagine him doing it—well, he's promised to take our plant. The New York contracts have been sent. When the sale is signed you and I are leaving at once for the States. You're going with me whether Kresch releases me from my promise or not. If necessary I'll appeal direct to the ambassador to have Kresch let you go."

If Carlson thought Mischa was guilty that was Carlson's affair. I wasn't going to desert Mischa now. I walked away from him. He watched me go. When I reached the corner and stopped a taxi and looked back he waved at me. I didn't wave back.

I wish I had now.

Evidence Points One Way.

It was a picture of Mischa and a tall, somber man. The inscription read: "Mischa and Peder. Venice. August 7, 1933."

"You may go. You may go to America. Good afternoon."

"America! You're not holding me any longer?"

"We don't need you. There can be no doubt that Fraulein Dryshenzoff is responsible for the murders in the inn." He picked up a sheet of paper from his desk. "We already have a complete report concerning her from the Mannheim officials. She is half Jewish. She is known to associate with both communistic and Jewish gatherings. She is small, dark-haired, active and a graduate of the University of Vienna, which is said to be a center of radical ideas. It is obvious that she was brought here by the Communists. I have no doubt that when we find her we will discover the means to make her confess her responsibility for the Kohlmann murder as well as that of Herr Taubek. I am sorry to have detained you in Heidelberg. If you get to Los Angeles you will remember me to my cousin? His name is Gustav Kresch."

"I thought you had arrested Geigen?" I tried to recall the conversation.

"We are holding him," said Kresch, formally. He was no longer soft and placid. The fat, comfortable face had suddenly become the square, hard, official exterior of a German police official. He stood up, bowed stiffly. "Good afternoon, Herr Tat-zohn. I am very busy."

I walked slowly out of his room. I glanced back at him from the door. His head was tipped sideways and he was observing me with a sly smile. The hard, official facade had vanished. I stepped downstairs to telephone Elaine that I could meet her now.

Fish Praises Glass Stand In Congress

New Yorker Speaks to Republican Women at Richmond.

Richmond, May 29 (Spl.).—Representative Hamilton Fish, jr. (Republican), of New York, in addressing a State-wide conference of Republican women today at the John Marshall Hotel, said he "thanked Heaven that the voice of Virginia in the halls of Congress is still fearless and outspoken against those who would tear down the Constitution and destroy the constitutional rights and liberties of the American people."

"I admire the courage and patriotism of Senator Carter Glass, who in the great crisis with which our free institutions are threatened does not hesitate to place the welfare of his country above the socialistic doctrines of his party, even though he stands almost alone," the Representative told a luncheon meeting attended by several hundred women and a large group of party leaders.

"There is only a handful of Senators, including his colleague, Senator Byrd, who dare openly to fight the unsound and un-American projects and brainstorms of the Brain Trust," he said, adding that the Virginia Representatives in the House "while still giving lip-service to Thomas Jefferson have voted on almost every occasion with the Brain Trust to repudiate Jeffersonian principles."

Predicts G. O. P. Victory.

"I hope the Republicans of Virginia will nominate their ablest and strongest candidates for Congress, and come out openly in defense of Jeffersonian principles of government and, above all, for the preservation of the integrity of the Constitution," Representative Fish said.

With the assertion that Socialism was not voted into power in the last Presidential election, Mr. Fish said the order of the day is "soak the rich, and even the people of moderate means."

Urging a Republican stand on progressive legislation and for social and industrial justice under the Constitution, the New York Representative said this is the way the Republican party is to "regain control of the Nation in 1936."

"Let us give business a chance, remove the heavy hand of Government control and regimentation," he said. "Let the Government encourage business to make reasonable profits, instead of placing private enterprise in a straight-jacket. Let the Government say to business, we are with you and not against you,' and stop advocating Government ownership and Socialism."

Says Leadership Is Needed.

Concluding his address, Mr. Fish said:

"The sound and constructive principles of the Republican party are more needed today than ever before to restore business confidence and to start the wheels of industry in order to provide employment for American wage earners, and we shall welcome the support of constitutional Democrats when they get ready to turn away from State Socialism back to the principles of Jefferson and Lincoln and the Constitution of the United States."

Republican women from various parts of Virginia met today with National women leaders from New York for the first State-wide conference of the kind ever held in the Old Dominion.

Mrs. Felix Parker, of Roanoke, leader of the Eastern division of the State, presided. Miss Ellis A. Yost, of Washington, director of the women's division of the Republican National committee, led the discussion, and Mrs. Murray Boocock, of Keswick, National committeewoman from Virginia, also was among the leaders. Mrs. H. E. Page, chairman of the Eastern division for Virginia, gave an optimistic report from her section.

Among the Northern leaders present were Mrs. Paul Fitzsimmons, of Newport, R. I., National committeewoman, and Mrs. George A. Wyeth, of New York, president of the Women's National Republican Club.

Jealousy Hint May Give Key To Attack Case

Youth, Recovering, Soon to Be Able to Tell Tale of Beating.

Fredericksburg, Va., May 29 (Spl.).—Department of Justice agents working on the Fredericksburg Battlefield Park attack case are confidently approaching a solution based on the jealousy theory, it was reported today, although the Washington men remained mute about their activities.

Hope came with his steady improvement today that Milton J. Brown, survivor of the mysterious attack ten days ago which cost the life of his fiancee, Miss Fannie Kurz, will soon be in a condition to help in tracking the assailant. Though not out of danger, the patient was brighter and more alert today, talked more, and is expected to recover unless complications arise.

Disconnected thoughts continue to distort his brain, subjected to the terrific blow on the night of attack. Attending physicians say his mentality may not be normal for many weeks.

Two Department of Justice men alternate at his bedside throughout the day and night, and no one is allowed to approach him save nurses, doctors and close members of his family.

Authorities today denied several statements reputed to Brown in published reports. It was officially denied that Brown had mentioned the name of "a large man who recently had been drinking." They furthermore denied that he had imputed a girl to be his assailant, though they admitted he said, "She hit me an awful blow over the eye."

It is said that no remarks made by the delirious patient so far directly implicate anyone.

Blonde Mildred Whitaker, local restaurant employe, today denied she had been interviewed by Department of Justice men. Though they had sought her without avail at her home and place of employment, she made it plain she had not been trying to avoid them and would gladly tell them all she knows.

She stated she used to go with Brown years ago, but has not seen him for some time and did not even know Miss Kurz.

Petersburg Will Hold Two Memorial Services

Petersburg, Va., May 29 (Spl.).—Tomorrow Petersburg will celebrate the Memorial Day with ceremonies conducted under auspices of the Petersburg Post of the American Legion.

On June 9, Memorial Day observance will honor the Confederate dead at Blandford Cemetery, where 30,000 Confererate soldiers rest. The speaker June 9 will be Dr. Lyon G. Tyler, former president of William and Mary and a son of President John Tyler.

Judge Bans Warrants In Detecting Rum Sales

Hagerstown, Md., May 29 (Spl.).—The use of search warrants in obtaining evidence in illegal whisky sales will not be countenanced until the law is so amended, Judge Frank G. Wagaman announced yesterday in upholding counsel for Frank Keys, Hagerstown, charged with sale of liquor without a license. Keys' case was dismissed.

The county liquor law makes no provision for issuance of search warrants.

Brunettes Turning Into Blondes Stir Plea for Board

Fairmont, W. Va., May 29 (Spl.).—Vigorous protest is being made by C. E. Smith, local editor and former United States marshal, against the transformation of Marion County brunettes into "beauty-shop-blondes."

"For the past six months," Smith said, "we have been away from home considerably and each time we return we find that some beauty shop has played hell with some of our friends."

Smith is advocating a State board before which each girl must prove, before being allowed to make the change, that such transformation will be satisfactory both to parents and friends.

Prelate Marks Anniversary

Mountain Missionary 30 Years Archdeacon of Blue Ridge.

Charlottesville, Va., May 29 (Spl.).—The Rev. Frederick W. Neve, founder of the mountain mission work in the Diocese of Virginia, and for 46 years rector of St. Paul's Episcopal Church at Ivy, Albemarle County, is rounding out 30 years' service as Archdeacon of the Blue Ridge this month. He was ordained 53 years ago.

Archdeacon Neve was born in County Kent, England, and was graduated at Oxford University in 1879. He was ordained deacon in 1880 and priest in 1881 and came to Virginia as rector of Emmanuel Episcopal Church, Greenwood, and St. Paul's Church, at Ivy, in 1888.

The mountain work in the Diocese of Virginia was started by him with the establishment of St. John the Baptist Mission in the mountains about 5 miles from Ivy. He extended from this point into other mountain fields until today there are more than 30 mission stations. He became archdeacon in 1904.

Acquittal Given in Fraud Trial.

Bristol, Va., May 29 (Spl.).—John A. Rawn, former Bristolian, but now of West Virginia, was acquitted of a charge of embezzlement when given trial in Sullivan County Circuit Court at Blountville, Tenn., last week.

Ritchie Pushes Primary Plans; Race Clouded

Jackson, Radcliffe, Both Ignored as Meeting of Aids Is Called.

Baltimore, Md., May 29 (Spl.).—Maryland's political situation, now highly complicated, faced further developments as Gov. Ritchie called a conference of advisers for tonight to discuss his primary campaign.

He called six or eight lieutenants who have been closest to him since his announcement that he seeks a fifth term at Annapolis. Political observers, however, considered it significant that he did not invite either Mayor Howard W. Jackson of Baltimore or George L. Radcliffe, regional director of the Public Works Administration.

Nor did he invite Senator Millard L. Tydings. All three of these men are prominent in Democratic politics in the State. Mayor Jackson is an avowed candidate for the gubernatorial nomination, and yesterday, at the behest of Senator Tydings, a group of Eastern Shore Democratic leaders asked Mr. Radcliffe to enter the race as a compromise candidate for the nomination.

Mr. Radcliffe has not yet given his answer. Today Gov. Ritchie and Mayor Jackson each declined to quit the primary fight.

Mayor Jackson's reply to a query as to whether he would abandon the race was brief and conclusive.

"My announcement (of candidacy for the gubernatorial nomination) was made only after the most careful consideration I could give the subject," he said. "It is final and I know of no circumstances which would cause me to retrace my steps."

Meanwhile fight for the Republican gubernatorial nomination was carried into widely separated sections of the State today as H. Webster Smith and a party departed for Cumberland and Harry W. Nice and a party started for the Eastern Shore. Each plans to spend most of the week looking over the ground.

Presbyterian Deacons Elected.

Lynchburg, Va., May 29 (Spl.).—Charles F. Cross, jr., Walter R. Crowe, Oscar E. Drinkard, R. W. B. Hart, J. R. Wheeler, C. Page Walker, Raine Sydnor and W. W. Phelps were elected deacons of Westminster Presbyterian Church at a congregational meeting Sunday.

Old Sea Fighters Converted to Use In Banana Trade

Norfolk, Va., May 29 (Spl.).—The Standard Fruit Co. announced today that it had purchased eight discarded destroyers from the Navy Department and had converted them into banana carriers.

The Worden and Whipple are in port having brought cargoes from Havana, Cuba. The Worden suffered slight damage when she struck an oil barge in the harbor. She returned for repairs, but is leaving tonight for Cuba.

The Standard Line just recently made Norfolk a port of call, ostensibly to meet the competition of the Nicholas Cuneo.

Virginia Rayon Strike Is Voted

Hopewell Plant Will Be Shut if Walkout Materializes.

Richmond, May 29 (Spl.).—A strike involving even only a few workers will result in the closing of one of the largest industrial plants in Virginia, it was stated today by Raymond S. Burrows, works manager of the Tubize Chatillion rayon plant at Hopewell, near here, following last night's announcement by officials of the newly organized United Textile Workers' Union, claiming that a strike vote taken yesterday showed 98.5 per cent of the participants as favoring a walkout.

No walk-out is anticipated, however, until after a conference between union representatives and the National Labor Board at Washington Friday.

"I have statements from a number of our employes who are affiliated with the union that there will be no strike as far as they are concerned, because they are satisfied with conditions," Mr. Burrows said today.

While no exact number of union members is known among the 2,000 employes of the Tubize plant, it is reported by many to be less than 25 per cent.

Strike sentiment has been growing among employes of the plant since a series of lay-offs began about two weeks ago. The union officials contend the weeding out has been directed against union members. The management asserts that the lay-offs are the result of a seasonal let up in the demand for rayon.

Rev. Chaffey Called To Princess Anne

Princess Anne, Md., May 29 (Spl.).—The Rev. Roland Chaffey, a graduate of Eastern Theological Seminary, Philadelphia, has accepted a call to become pastor of the Princess Anne Baptist Church, a letter to the official board states.

Mr. Chaffey, who has preached here on several occasions, is well known to the Baptist congregation. He will assume the pastorate the first Sunday in July.

The Rev. Frank K. Brasington, present pastor, will engage in religious educational work in Maryland during the summer and in the fall will enter Richmond College, Richmond, Va., to complete his preparation for ministerial work. Mr. Brasington has been pastor here for more than a year.

Here's How to Mix Mint Juleps To Meet Bon Vivant Tastes

Richmond, May 29 (AP).—Jacob Kahn is, he insists, a "crusher," therefore he hates to sell the succulent green mint he grows in his South Richmond garden to a "stick-erinner."

"The right way to make a julep is to crush the mint in with sugar," Kahn proclaimed, as he offered bunches of mint at the door of the Broad street State liquor dispensary here today.

"If you do that, the whisky kind of gets working on the juice of the leaves and takes their strength.

"With corn whisky it's another matter. The best way to make a julep from good old 'cawn' is to squash the leaves down into the sugar, but don't stir the sugar. Leave it in the bottom of the glass. Drink down to it and then throw it away."

Under those circumstances, the mint man explained, any impurities in the whisky are absorbed by the sugar and the drink is as innocuous as a drink could be.

Business, he says, has been "average."

"Most folks nowadays don't seem to have time to mix their juleps properly. They just go in and buy some 'licker' and take it out and drink it."

Military Mass Draws Throng From Capital

Thousands Will March in Parade and Take Part in Services.

Baltimore, May 29 (Spl.).—Communicants of the Catholic Church from Washington will have important parts in the military mass at the Baltimore stadium tomorrow, which will constitute the archdiocese of Baltimore's celebration of the Maryland tercentenary and the one-hundredth anniversary of the birth of Cardinal Gibbons.

There will be thousands of pupils of Washington parochial schools in the parade, which will precede the stadium mass, and there will be other thousands from parochial schools in western and southern Maryland. There will also be representative groups from virtually all the Catholic institutions of higher learning.

Throughout the ceremonies in the stadium, a detail of uniformed youths from the Reserve Officers Training Corps of Georgetown University, cadets from St. John's College at Washington, and units of other military organizations, will stand at attention facing the altar.

If the weather is clear, at least 15,000 Washingtonians and thousands of others from western Maryland, southern Maryland, and other areas within the archdiocese of Baltimore, are expected to view the parade and attend the stadium mass. A crowd totaling at least 100,000 is anticipated.

Gov. Albert C. Ritchie, Mayor Howard W. Jackson, and numerous other city and State officials will be in the reviewing stand. Archbishop Michael J. Curley will officiate at the mass, and the Rev. Peter Guilday, professor of Church History at the Catholic University, will preach the sermon. Twelve ranking bishops of the Catholic Church in America will be present at the exercises.

A children's choir will sing "The Star-Spangled Banner" and "Holy God We Praise Thy Name," at the end of the ceremonies, and the entire assemblage within the stadium is asked to join in the singing.

Graduating Class Will Present Play

Spotsylvania Courthouse, Va., May 29 (Spl.).—Robert E. Lee High School's graduating class will begin its commencement program at 8 p. m. Friday with presentation of "Aunt Betty of Butte," the senior play.

Sunday, at 8 p. m., the Rev. J. J. Ambler, of Trinity Episcopal Church, of Fredericksburg, will deliver the baccalaureate sermon in the Berea Church. The junior-senior banquet will be held Tuesday evening and class night exercises Wednesday at 8 p. m.

At 8 p. m. Thursday, Dr. Eileen K. Dodd, of Fredericksburg State Teachers College, will deliver the commencement address. Those graduating are Kintner Perry, Mary Ellen Clark, Geraldine Dickinson, Lucille Dickinson, Ruby Evelyn Harlow, Reta Jett, Lena Lumsden, Cora Lee McWhirt, Lillian Pritchett, Lucy Pritchett, Evelyn Spangler and Florine Trainum.

Rail Aid Absent Only Day in 53 Years to Retire

Service Record Without Equal on Western Maryland Road.

Hagerstown, Md., May 29 (Spl.).—A record of service declared by officials of the Western Maryland Railroad without equal will close Thursday when Frank S. Rowe, of Hagerstown, traveling freight agent, completes 53 years and two months of service and will be retired. During that period he had been absent from work only one day, because of illness.

Last night, 100 officials and employes of the railroad, including General Manager C. W. Brown and E. R. Bardgett, vice president, honored Mr. Rowe at a dinner.

Mr. Rowe began his career with the railroad when he was 12 years old, and during his long service has served in every department of that railroad. His first service was that of message boy and crossing watchman at Owings Mills, Md. Later he learned telegraphy and became an operator.

Ruling Blocks Coblentz Trial At Baltimore

Prosecutor, However, Will Appeal Case Against Frederick Man.

Baltimore, May 29 (Spl.).—Two judges in criminal court here today sustained a demurrer to the general indictment against State Senator Emory L. Coblentz, of Frederick, accused of fraudulent corporate representation in connection with the collapse of the Central Trust Co. of Frederick in 1931.

The ruling by the judges halted the scheduled trial of Coblentz, for which 22 witnesses were in the courtroom ready to testify.

Collapse of the case today does not mean, however, that Coblentz will not go on trial eventually, according to State's Attorney James Clark, of Howard County. Clark said he will file an appeal.

Clark said the corporate representation angle of the case will be pressed to a finish before any action is taken on three other indictments still pending against Coblentz.

Besides the proposed appeal, another course is open to the prosecution, it was pointed out by Judge George A. Solter in his written ruling. The prosecution can move to have Coblentz reindicted on the corporate representation angle, if it cares to do so.

The indictment quashed today, as well as the three others not involved in the ruling, was returned last August 3 by the Howard County grand jury.

Coblentz has been tried once before on charges in connection with the Central Trust Co.'s collapse, once at Frederick, and once at Cumberland. In one case he was acquitted, in the other convicted; but the conviction was later upset by the Court of Appeals.

Washington County Tax Rate May Be Increased

Hagerstown, Md., May 29 (Spl.).—The board of county commissioners will fix Washington County's tax rate Friday. The rate probably will be from 3 to 3½ cents more on the $100 to take care of election costs this fall, but this increase will be offset by a reduction in the State rate from 25 to 22 cents.

The city rate, which will also be fixed within the next week, probably will remain the same as last year, $1 on the $100, city officials said.

Virginia Gets Mail-Order Liquor Sales

A.B.C. Board Will Place New System in Effect June 4.

"Oases" Are Abolished; Residents in Dry Areas May Buy.

Richmond, May 29 (AP).—The Virginia Alcoholic Beverage Control Board tonight announced a State-wide mail-order and express delivery system for the sale of wine and hard liquor which changes the present "oasis" system into one of general sale.

No longer will residents of Richmond, Norfolk and other urban centers alone have ready access to State-sold rum. On June 4 the new program becomes effective and from that date Virginians may order liquor by mail from the board's offices. Since liquor shipments by mail are barred by postal regulations, shipments will be made by express. They will be made, for the time being, from the store on West Broad street, Richmond, where a special department will be created to handle the out-of-town business.

The board said, as it announced the plan, that retail price lists would not be ready for distribution before June 4.

Residents of the 35 counties and 2 cities which voted against State liquor control, will have the same rights under the mail-order system as residents of wet communities. Their orders will be accepted and the goods shipped, the board said.

The board also said that the main purpose of setting up the system is to enable persons where stores have not yet been opened, or where they may never be opened, to have an opportunity of purchasing legal liquor if they wish.

That that number is not decreasing was indicated in an announcement of the selection of two additional store sites.

Poppy Day Sale Drops In Fredericksburg

Fredericksburg, Va., May 29 (Spl.).—The smallest poppy day sale ever recorded here netted less than $50 Saturday.

With an average of more than $200 recorded in past years, the American Legion Auxiliary plans to set another poppy day to increase the local contribution to the benefit fund for World War veterans and their widows and children.

Father of 13 Killed In Highway Accident

Weirton, W. Va., May 29 (Spl.).—J. J. Bassick, proprietor of stores in Weirton, and Hopedale, Ohio, and father of 13 children is dead of injuries received when struck by an automobile while repairing a flat tire on a roadside. He died in a hospital last night.

A son, William, and a daughter, Ruth, escaped injury by leaping from the car before it was struck by the other machine.

Gaylor Is Investigator For License Board

Hagerstown, Md., May 29 (Spl.).—The Washington County License Board has announced the appointment of Clarence A. Gaylor, former mayor of Williamsport, as investigator.

He will succeed Charles E. Cushwa, former prohibition agent stationed here, who has been appointed Federal investigator.

Nats Open Crucial Series in New York Today With Holiday Twin Bill

Great Crowd Of 60,000 Expected

Gomez, Whitehill Due to Oppose in Southpaw Duel in Opener.

Stewart, Murphy Ready for Nightcap; Nats May Shift Order.

By Shirley L. Povich
(Sports Editor of The Post).

NEW YORK, May 29 (Spl.).—Who's who and what's what in this American League pennant race is in a fair way toward being established with the Nats bivouacked tonight in New York as they prepare to storm the ramparts of Yankee Stadium for three skirmishes in two days, commencing with a Decoration Day double-bill tomorrow.

The Nats are back on the scenes of their 1933 triumphs, for it was in New York last year that the Washington Club consistently beat off the challenge of the Yankees and smashed their way to the pennant by routing the New York Club in the latter's home grounds.

Manager Joe Cronin again has contrived to bring to bear against the Yankees, in the three battles that are imminent, the pitching veterans of the 1933 campaigns in New York—the southpaws Earl Whitehill and Walter Stewart, and the right-hander, Monte Weaver, who parried the fire of the powerful Yankee batting brigade so successfully last season that the Nats virtually sealed their pennant triumph in New York.

Gomez Faces Nats.

On the firing line for the Yankees in the first game will be Manager McCatrhy's own southpaw ace, Lefty Gomez, who will oppose Earl Whitehill in what bears the earmarks of a left-handed pitching duel. McCarthy will fling Gomez into the opening battle in an effort to gain the psychological edge that goes with every opening victory of a series.

In that second game, which will find the diminutive Walter Stewart seeking to repeat his numerous triumphs of last year over the Yanks, McCarthy is expected to present the newest sensation of the Yankee hurling corps, young Johnny Murphy, the former Fordham and Newark right-hander, who has installed himself high in the esteem of the Yankee pilot.

With the repeated failures of Red Ruffing, Russ Van Atta and Danny MacFayden in recent starts for the Yankees, young Murphy has won his way to ranking as a starting pitcher and McCarthy has in mind the impressive seven-inning relief role of the former college boy against the Nats earlier in the season in Washington when he relieved Van Atta in the first inning and held the Nats to 3 hits until the seventh.

68,000 Fans Expected.

No less than 60,000 noncombatants are expected to sit in on the proceedings tomorrow, attracted by the holiday bargain bill that brings together the two potential pennant winners whose intense rivalry fo recent years has written a blood-red chapter in American League annals.

New York fans will be out in force despite the fact that the Nats and Yanks are meeting for the first time in two seasons with neither club occupying first place in the American League. That position now belongs to the Cleveland Indians, with the Yankees second and the Nats in fourth place.

But the eyes of the league will be on the Washington-New York clashes at the Stadium, for the results of the approaching series is expected to have lasting effect on the pennant race, if either club scores a sweep of the three games.

Despite the high station of the Cleveland Club, and the presence of the Detroit Tigers in third place ahead of the Nats, New York and Washington are still viewed as the two teams that must be beaten by any pretender to the pennant.

Yanks Flopped in West.

Joe Cronin shepherded his Nats through the West with a record of seven defeats and five victories, while the Yankees experienced one of their most disastrous road tours in their history.

McCarthy's club, encountering 8 defeats in 12 games in the West, tumbled out of first place a week ago and unbelieving New Yorkers are expected to trek to the stadium tomorrow to see what transformation has come over the club that lost only two games in its home stand earlier in the month.

There's a possibility that Cronin will juggle his batting order out of respect to the southpaw pitching the Nats will encounter against Gomez. The Nats' attack now features Myer, Kuhel, Manush, Travis and Stone, all left-handed sluggers, as the first five men in the batting order, and Cronin may reinstall himself in fourth place with Schulte batting fifth against Gomez, which means that Stone will bat sixth and Travis seventh.

Leetown Lions Divide.

Martinsburg, W. Va., May 29 (Spl.).—The Leetown Lions split a double-header with the Pikeside A. C. at Leetown, winning the first 8 to 7, and losing the second, 11 to 6.

The first game was a closely-fought contest with the lead changing hands several times. Siford held Leetown to six blows in the nightcap, while his mates nicked L. Edwards and Grim for nine.

Tribe Wins 5th In Row; Beats White Sox

League Lead Is Increased; Harder Grants 5 Hits to Score 5 to 0.

CLEVELAND, Ohio, May 29 (AP).—Digging in at the top spot in the American League as if for a long stay, the Cleveland Indians today defeated the Chicago White Sox, 5 to 0, and ran their winning streak to five straight games.

Mel Harder, pitching his first victory of the year, allowed the White Sox only five hits, while the Indians were touching Gaston and Heving, the Chicago pitchers, for ten blows.

Big Hal Trosky, Cleveland first baseban, lifted one over the right-field wall for his fifth home run of the season. It was the twelfth successive game in which he has hit safely. In addition to his home run, Trosky connected for a double.

Scores in First.

Cleveland scored the first run in the first inning when Bob Seeds, recently acquired from Boston, sent a scorching double to center field. Madjeski dropped a third strike on Knickerbocker and Knickerbocker reached first safely while Seeds went to third. Seeds scored when Averill hit into a double play.

33 Auto Pilots Await Speed Classic Today

INDIANAPOLIS, May 29 (AP).—Defying death that lurks in every turn of the track, America's premier drivers tomorrow morning will roar away in the twenty-second 500-mile automobile race at the Indianapolis Motor Speedway.

Thirty-three men, behind the steering wheels of the fastest and most durable speedsters ever built for the classic, comprise the starting field. Riding beside each driver will be a mechanic, willing to risk everything for a minor share of the glory which will go to the winner.

Speed fans, tingling with excitement and abosrbing some of the devil-may-care attitude of the drivers, crowded the hotels for the annual pre-race celebrations. Beer parlors and night clubs, unrestricted as to closing hours, also did a thriving business.

Record Is Imperiled.

Stewards of the racing game, appalled at the fatalities here a year ago when five men lost their lives, have tried to handicap the drivers sufficiently to curb excessive speed. The prospects are considered good however that the record of 104.162 miles an hour for 500 miles, set by Louis Meyer, the California comet, in 1933, will be bettered.

Practically all of the veteran pilots who are still in the dangerous sport will participate. Meyer, the American driving champion and the only former winner here to qualify for tomorrow's renewal, will seek his third victory. He has a new four-cylinder car.

Other old timers to strive for a share of the $100,000 of prize money include Red ("Phil") Shafer, of Des Moines, Iowa, who will make his tenth attempt to win. Wilbur Shaw, Indianapolis, second a year ago; Ralph Hepburn, and Cliff Bergere, both of Los Angeles; Chet Gardner, of Long Beach, Calif., and Dave Evans, of Columbus, Ind., are among those who will race.

Two Are Missing.

Two of their kind—Pete Kreis, of Knoxville, Tenn., and Fred Frame, of Los Angeles, winner two years ago—will not be beating the rough bricks of the two and one-half-mile course. Kreis and Bobby Hahn, of Chico, Calif., his mechanic, rode to their deaths last week while practicing. Frame escaped serious injury in an accdent yesterday, but could not repair his car in time for the race.

Challenging the veterans are Al Gordon, of Long Beach, Calif., the Pacific Coast champion; Rex Mays, another California youngster with a sensational record, and Kelly Petillo, a third boy from the Western coast. Petillo, with a thrilling burst of speed, won the pole position in the qualifying trials, averaging 119.329 miles an hour.

The winner tomorrow will receive approximately $40,000. First prize is $20,000, with additional money for leadership in the various laps, and from automobile accessory firms.

Frederick Takes League Play-off

Defeats Middletown High by 18-4 Score.

Middletown, Md., May 29 (Spl.).—Frederick took the measure of Middletown in the play-off for the pennant in the Southern Division of the County High School League at the home park, 18 to 4. The teams finished the regular schedule on even terms and the victory entitles Frederick to meet Thurmont, pennant winner of the Northern Division, for the county championship.

Hickman held Middletown to three hits. Frederick scored two runs in the first frame and added six more in the fourth.

What was expected to be a close contest developed into a weird exhibition in which 16 errors, 10 by Middletown and 6 by Frederick, set a record for the season.

Welch Effective, Red Sox Down A's

Hurler Gives Two Hits in 7-Inning Game.

Philaldelphia, May 29 (AP).—Johnny Welch, young Boston right-hander, pitched the Red Sox out of a tie with the Athletics into sole possession of sixth place, as he beat the A's, 2 to 1, in a seven-inning contest today.

The game wah halted by rain in the first half of the eighth just after Dick Porter and Rick Ferrell had touched Merrit (Sugar) Cain for home runs that would have increased the Boston lead.

Welch gave onl ytwo hits in the shortened contest, walked only two despite the dampness, and fanned eight. Bob Johnson hit a Philadelphia homer in the first and Hal Finney singled in the second for the Athletics' only hits.

Giants Defeat Dodgers, 4-3; Near Lead

Luque Quells Foe's Rally After Fitzsimmons Fails in 7th.

BROOKLYN, May 29 (AP).—The superb relief pitching of the veteran Adolfo Luque turned back Brooklyn's seventh-inning bid today and enabled the Giants to win the opening game of the series, 4 to 3.

The triumph, coupled with the idleness of St. Louis and Pittsburgh, put the Giants in a threatening position with respect to the league leaders. Due to Pittsburgh's having played fewer games, they remained one point down to the Pirates in the percentages while the count showed them only a half game to the rear of the first-place Cards.

The Giants bunched eight of their eleven hits in the first four innings off Ray Benge, Joe Moore doing most of the damage with a single, double and triple. Leading by four runs, Big Fred Fitzsimmons pitched shutout ball until the seventh, when a fine rain, which fell through most of the game, moistened the ball so Fitz could not maintain his knuckle ball grip.

Stoefen Gets Davis Cup Berth

Shields and Wood Also Named for Singles Play Abroad.

Lott, Van Ryn Team Up; Allison, Hurt Here, Not on Team.

NEW YORK, May 29 (AP).—Lester R. Stoefen's campaign for a berth on the Davis Cup team was crowned with success today when the United States Lawn Tennis Association nominated the towering Californian along with Frank X. Shields and Sidney B. Wood, jr., as candidates for singles play abroad an international competition this summer.

Together they represent America's most determined effort to find the right combination after seven years of disappointment in the quest to recapture the trophy.

This trio of crack individualists, experienced in international play with theexception of Stoefen, will be backed up by the trenchant doubles team of the veterans George Martin Lott, jr., and John Van Ryn.

Policy Set Aside.

Whereas the association in the past picked its two singles players before the team sailed abroad, this year the powers set aside that policy, designating three players, as well as leaving the door open for two doubles combinations.

Stoefen, raised on the courts of Los Angeles, was the sensation of the winter indoor and early spring outdoor seasons.

He is the only newcomer to Davis Cup play abroad. Wood and Shields represented the United States in singles in the 1931 interzone final against Great Britain, in which Shields defeated Fred Perry, and Lott and Van Ryn won the doubles.

Assuming the United States defeats Mexico in the final North American zone series beginning tomorrow at Baltimore, the five players, along with Capt. Williams, will sail aboard the S. S. Paris on June 9, arriving in time to play in the Queen's tournament, beginning une 18, if Williams so instructs them. Otherwise, the squad will spend the week of June 17 in practice and enter the Wimbledon championships on June 25.

The squad then will have approximately two weeks in which to tune up for the Davis Cup interzone final, which will be played on Wimbledon's grass courts July 21, 23 and 24.

Wilmer Allison, the Texas veteran who was a strong prospect for the team until May 5, when he sprained an ankle badly at Washington, was not named to the squad because the injury is healing so slowly as to incapacitate him for some time.

Whiteford Winner In Banker's Tourney

White Sulphur Springs, W. Va., May 29 (Spl.).—Roger J. Whiteford, counsel and director of the Hamilton National Bank, Washington, won the Hibbs Cup in the golf tournament conducted in connection with the annual District of Columbia bankers convention here today.

The Pop Fleming Cup went to Ora Preston, president Union Trust Co.; the Hatton Cup to Horace G. Smithy, director the Hamilton National Bank; the Shannon Cup to Holly Stover, of Riggs National Bank, and McLachlen Cup to R. Edward Hotze, of The Washington Post. Mrs. Charlotte Collady won the ladies putting contest.

The Mangan Tennis Cup was won by Charlie Carroll Morgan, copartner of the G. M. P. Murphy & Co.; the McLean Cup, for top shinning, by J. Frank White, vic epresident and cashier, National Bank of Washington, and the Gruver Cup, for horseshoe pitching, by A. N. Miller, director of the Riggs National Bank.

Triple-Play Aids In Braves' Victory

Feat Performed in Second; Phils Bow, 6-4.

Boston, May 29 (AP).—The first triple-play the Boston Braves have executed this season came in handy for Fred Frankhouse today while he was taming the Phillies, 6-4, for his seventh winning start.

The three-dead play came in the second. Hurst and Haslin belted out clean singles with none out and the Boston outlook was dubious until Frankhouse caught Jeffries' sizzling drive. He snapped the ball to Jordon at first to nail Haslin off the sack and Baxter's throw reached Urbanski before Hurst could scramble back to second.

Ross-Dundee Title Fight Looms

Gets $36,835 as Share; Will Go to Chicago Early in June.

NEW YORK, May 29 (AP).—Barney Ross, first man ever to hold the rightweight and welterweight titles at the same time, looked brightly out of one good eye today toward new horizons—and his half-powered gaze lighted on the middleweight realm of Vince Dundee.

The ambitions of this amazing young man from Chicago who walloped the welter crown from the head of Jimmy McLarnin last night would embarrass a Caesar. But it's all as normal and natural to Barney as was his prefight statement few of experts would believe—"McLarnin simply can't beat me."

Would Fight Any One.

"Sure," said Ross today as he loafed around a hotel room with only a purple, half-closed left eye to show he was just returned from the fistic wars. "I'll fight any one, and I think Dundee would be easier than McLarnin was. If the fans would like to see me fight him, I'm ready. Wouldn't that be something, lightweight, welterweight, middleweight champion?"

While McLarnin, his face battered, his heart broken, hid himself away, Ross had a field day. Congratulations, vaudeville offers, even a suspension from the National Boxing Association for failure to go through with a fight in Fort Worth, Tex., poured in on him.

To Return to Chicago.

He's going back to his training camp at Ferndale, N. Y., to rest a few days before returning to Chicago for the graduation from high school early next month of his youngest brother, George. Ross, technically, has been the head of the big Rasofsky clan since his

Race Street 2½ Lengths In Rear

Marge in Show Position; Start Is Delayed for 10 Minutes.

Rain Fails to Hurt Time; Daily Double Pays Only $16.90.

By Walter Haight
(Post Staff Correspondent).

CHARLES TOWN, W. Va., May 29.—Vacillate, a 7-year-old mare which has earned her way in first flight racing in her better days, toyed with a field of seven selling platers here this afternoon and won the Bolivar Heights, the day's 6½ furlong feature race. Now the property of W. I. Newmarch, Vacillate scampered home two lengths and a half ahead of Race Street, which in turn had an advantage of a half-length over Marge.

She was the fourth straight favorite of the day to triumph, but the string of public choice successes ended there. However, for the remainder of the program well-played horses won, making it a good day for form followers.

Start Is Delayed.

Race Street was the chief offender as the start of the feature was delayed 10 minutes. Norforius as a bad post actor, Race Street might have acted almost reasonable had not Plain Peggy, an 84-1 shot, decided to do a little cutting up herself. When Race Street saw Peggy stealing his stuff, he want on the warpath and it was only after he had been placed on the outside of the starting stalls that the field was sent away.

Race Street might have been on his bad behavior, but also had his speed for in the dash for the first turn, he went to the front under a pumping ride by Jockey Sam Palumbo. Going around the first turn, Vacillate was hot on his heels and on the back stretch the mare gradually moved up to take the lead. Gaither, who had the mount, then hand-rode home while Race Street, Marge and the others did some futile chasing.

Pays $4.20 Mutuel.

Vacillate was the favorite throughout the betting and supplied a $4.20 mutuel.

One of the smallest mutuels in the short history of the track marked the "daily double." Little Wacket and Lampoon, both heavily-played choices, were the winning combination and the pay-off was $16.90.

Showers fell several times during the afternoon, but they served only to lay the dust. In fact, the best time of the five sprints over the 6½-furlong course was that of Noras Grace, winner of the sixth race. She was clocked in 1:21 flat.

Golf Teams to Clash.

Martinsville, Va., May 29 (Spl.).—Martinsville, Bassett, Mount Airy and Galax golf teams will meet in a four-way tournament tomorrow afternoon at the Bassett Country Club course. Each team will have ten players.

Ross May Battle Dundee for Title

Despite the fact the bowl was nearly filled, with only a few of its 65,000 seats unoccupied, the official paid attendance today was put at 39,968 and the receipts at $194,329.67. McLarnin's share was $58,936.60 and Ross collected $36,835.38.

A Great Fighter.

"I'll give McLarnin another chance as soon as he wants it," Ross said. "He's a great fighter and a terrific puncher. When we shook hands after the decision I told him al lthat. I told him I'd fight him again any time. All he said was 'thanks.' "

Negotiations were started today for a return match, but McLarnin was in no mood t otalk fight. There was some feeling he might never pull on gloves again, now that his domination of Jewish warriors that has taken in al lof them from Benny Leonard down in the past half dozen years has been broken. He has even called off the trip he planned to Ireland.

"They'd probably stone me in the streets of Dublin now," 'he said.

Has Glorious Time.

While Ross was enthusing over McLarnin's punching power, Mrs. Rasofsky, his mother, had a glorious time cutting up old touches with former neighbors down in Rivington street, in the heart of the East Side Ghetto. Today she was not only a neighbor who moved to Chicago over 20 years ago, but the mother as well of a new Jewish hero.

Didn't he lick that terrible Irisher, that McLarnin, who was al lthe time pummeling the Singers and Kaylans and Goldsteins?

Ross intends to return here to see the Baer-Carnera heavyweight title fight in June. As one smart fellow suggested:

"He'll probably be in the ring challenging the winner."

First race—This Play galloped to an easy victory in his last trip to the post. Finds only fair competition in this field and should make it two in a row. Clear Knight has shown evidence of rounding into form and may be dangerous, although he prefers a shorter route. Mint Bud won here last December.

Second race—Nora's Grace, if sent back, could repeat her victory of today. If she is scratched, I look for Fair Clark to take the main end of the purse. Gaither will ride, and he knows this horse. Princess Wrack for the show end.

Third race—Mordrom ran a good race here opening day, and a little improvement would find the veteran scoring over a field of this caliber. Clocker Mike is singing the praises of Golden Castle. Baby Rox to take care of the others.

Fourth race—Ada Wan is the best bet of the day, but hardly will pay cigarette money. This one looked like a stake horse over at Hagerstown. Palumbo will ride. Rustic Cuba will be ready if the top one makes mistakes. Fair Jack for the show.

Eighth race—McDonald H., off that last effort, looks like the winner of the finale. Bokie B. sprinted today and might go on to be dangerous if sent back. Lenox Avenue to outfoot the others.

Woodring Resigns Job As Martinsburg Pilot

Martinsburg, W. Va., May 29 (Spl.).—Arthur Woodring, manager of the local Blue Sox team in the Blue Ridge League this season since its inception, has resigned, effective immediately. His successor has not been named, but it is expected to be some one from the present roster of the club.

Woodring's inability to give needed attention to the club except to sacrifice his own business interests was given as the cause of his action. The team has won four games and lost three since it started. Ten games remain to be played and the team stands second in the league. Woodring is expected to continue a playing member of the team.

MAPLE SUE, a forward contender all the way, made a vain bid for supremacy at top of stretch, and was tiring at end. TURMOIL worked her way into contention on outside on the back stretch, and closed well.

SECOND RACE—Six and one-half furlongs. Purse, $300; claiming. For 3-year-olds and upward. Start good from gates. Won easily; place, same. Went to post at 2:30. Off at 2:30. Winner, E. C. Gray's b. c. (3), by Peanuts—Nubia. Trained by W. Wright. Value to winner, $200; second, $60; third, $30; fourth, $10. Time, 1:21 2-5.

Two-dollar mutuels paid—NIGGERTOE, $3.20, $2.80, $2.20; CURLING, $8.40, $3.20; LODORUS, $3.00.

NIGGERTOE had good speed to take command immediately after start, drew into a safe lead while under restraint, and drew out in the stretch. CURLING, well up throughout, saved ground on inside, but could not match the speed of winner. LODORUS moved up stoutly on far turn, and closed well.

THIRD RACE—Six and one-half furlongs. Purse, $300; claiming. For 3-year-olds and upward. Start fair from gates. Won easily; place, driving. Went to post at 2:56. Off at 3:03. Winner, L. E. Barnes' ch. g. (6), by Lucky Hour—Crooked Work. Trained by owner. Value to winner, $200; second, $60; third, $30; fourth, $10. Time, 1:23.

Two-dollar mutuels paid—LAMPOON, $5.20, $4.20, $3.00; BURLEIGH, $5.60, $3.40; BOKIE B., $3.20.

LAMPOON, getting a step at the gate, drew out into the lead at once, was steadied along under restraint throughout, and drew out easily. BURLEIGH, a forward contender all the way, had no excuses. BOKIE B., a distant trailer in the early running, closed a huge gap.

FOURTH RACE—Six and one-half furlongs. Purse, $300; claiming. For 3-year-olds and upward. Start good from gates. Won easily; place, driving. Went to post at 3:29. Off at 3:29. Winner, W. J. Newmarch's b. m. (5), by Volta—Compose. Trained by H. G. Bedwell. Value to winner, $200; second, $60; third, $30; fourth, $10. Time, 0:24, 0:35 2-5, 0:47 2-5, 1:14, 1:22.

CIPOLYM	111	5	8	8	8	8	8	Morrison	436.20

Two-dollar mutuels paid—VACILLATE, $4.20, $2.80, $2.20; RACE STREET, $4.60, $2.40; MARGE, $2.20.

VACILLATE, away forwardly, assumed command on the back stretch, drew out easily when given his head, and had speed in reserve at the finish. RACE STREET, fractious at the post, broke from outside the stalls, assumed a short early lead going into the first turn, could not withstand VACILLATE but hung on well. MARGE, after losing ground from the start, closed well. KIBITZER made up some ground from a slow beginning. ROUND BEND raced evenly. BLACK CHERRY lacked speed.

FIFTH RACE—Six and one-half furlongs. Purse, $300; claiming. For 3-year-olds and upward. Start good from gates. Won ridden out; place, driving. Went to post at 4:02. Off at 4:11. Winner, Mrs. B. Scriol's b. c. (3), by Westy Hogan—Frat Girl. Trained by B. Scriol. Value to winner, $200; second, $60; third, $30; fourth, $10. Time, 0:24 3-5, 0:36 4-5, 0:49, 1:15 2-5, 1:22 1-5.

TIMBUCKTOO	119	6	10	5½	10	10	9½	Edwards	50.00

Two-dollar mutuels paid—WHIRRY, $10.20, $4.00, $4.40; TRISTRAP, $8.20, $4.20; HACKY H., $4.20.

WHIRRY, fleeted off the early pace, moved up stoutly on the inside when leaving the back stretch, continued through on the inside when entering the front straightaway, gradually improved his position on the outside, closed well, and won going away. TRISTRAP, slow to find his best speed, improved his position on the outside, closed well, and wore down HACKY H. PUKKA HEAVEN had good early speed, but faltered at the end. MERRY MISS, DAISY BUCK and BUSEY ICK raced evenly. JOBS DIDO quit.

SIXTH RACE—Six and one-half furlongs. Purse, $300; claiming. For 3-year-olds and upward. Start good from gates. Won easily; place, driving. Went to post at 4:35. Off at 4:35. Winner, D. L. Doerner's b. m. (6), by Lantados—Nora Dardy. Trained by E. Bruning. Value to winner, $200; second, $60; third, $30; fourth, $10. Time, 0:24, 0:36 1-5, 0:48 2-5, 1:14 1-5, 1:21.

GOLDEN GWYN	110	3	5	5½	7½	9	9	Balzaretti	7.50

Two-dollar mutuels paid—NORA'S GRACE, $12.20, $4.80, $3.20; WORTHINGTON, $3.20, $2.40; DUNORA, $4.40.

NORA'S GRACE, away well, and having good speed, assumed command at once, was rated in front throughout, and had enough left to hold WORTHINGTON safe. The latter, fastest to begin, was restrained behind the pace of the winner while saving ground on the inside, moved up threateningly on the inside in the stretch, and just failed to get up. DUNORA, fractious at the post, broke from outside the stalls, raced on the outside all the way, moved up stoutly on the stretch, and just lasted eighth. HOLLAND, a forward factor at all times, could not withstand the challenge of the first three while holding on well on the inside. WANDREL closed a good gap. JIM MOSS had a flash of early speed. MOST ALWAYS could not keep up, and stopped badly.

SEVENTH RACE—One and one-sixteenth miles. Purse, $300; claiming. For 3-year-olds and upward. Start good from gates. Won easily; place, driving. Went to post at 5:06½. Off 5:06½. Winner, R. A. Hall's ch. g. (6), by Sandy Beal—Belle of Plymouth. Trained by R. A. Baker. Value to winner, $200; second, $60; third, $30; fourth, $10. Time, 0:25, 0:37, 0:50 2-5, 1:16 2-5, 1:44 2-5, 1:49 4-5.

Two-dollar mutuels paid—SAND BELL, $8.60, $4.40, $5.60; MISS CATALAN, $3.20, $3.00; DO TELL, $10.60.

SAND BELL, close to the early pace, went to the front under mild urging midway the back stretch, drew out into a safe lead, and was in hand to the end. MISS CATALAN, sluggish in the early running, moved up quickly when entering the front straightaway and closed very fast, but could not menace the winner. DO TELL, for the entire trip, and hung on well. ZOMBRO had good early speed but faltered at the end. FREE ADVICE raced wide, for the entire trip, and hung on well. ZOMBRO had good early speed but faltered at the end. FREE ADVICE raced wide, for the entire trip, and hung on well. ZOMBRO had good early speed but faltered at the end. THERMOPYLAE lacked speed.

Stocks Settle Again Into Rut Of Dullness

New York, May 29 (AP).—Settling deeper into inertia before the Memorial Day recess, the stock market distinguished itself today only by establishing a new record for dullness for the past decade.

Price movements were mixed and narrow generally, although the thinness of the market resulted in relatively wide fluctuations for a few issues.

Sales on the stock exchange dropped to 379,252 shares, the smallest recorded since June 2, 1924. With turnover so far in May indicating that it would be the quietest month the exchange has experienced since March, 1933, when the market was closed part of the month during the banking holiday, brokers went ahead with plans to reduce overhead costs by paring staffs and pay schedules.

Market Stays in Rut.

The market stayed in the rut it has occupied the past week. Trading was too small to cause much movement one way or the other. Minor losses outnumbered gains at the close. The average of 90 stocks dipped three-tenths of a point to 77.8.

The dollar again displayed a firm tone against leading foreign exchanges.

The holiday in leading markets tomorrow hastened profit-taking by traders after the creeping advance of the past few days. Losses of small fractions were chalked up against such shares as United States Steel common, General Motors, Consolidated Gas, New York Central, Montgomery Ward, United Aircraft, National Distillers and Westinghouse Electric.

So slight was the interest in the market only 100 shares of one of the outstanding issues of the board, American Telephone & Telegraph, appeared on the tape. During the noon hour, only about 40,000 shares changed hands throughout the list.

Still confused by the mixed spectacle presented by trade statistics, uncertainty over possible effects of Federal control of speculation and strike threats, traders felt more comfortable on the sidelines than in the market. Many stayed away from Wall street in advance of the holiday. Washington developments had no perceptible response in the market. Armour of Illinois preferred ended nearly 2 points higher following further study of the new recapitalization plan. Several preferred stocks rose 1 to 2 points on a few sales, among them Associated Dry Goods, Kresge Department Stores and Ward Baking.

Silver shares were easier. A thin market was disclosed in International Silver, as it sold 4⅝ points under the previous sale. Other metal shares sagged, too.

Wool Market.

Boston, May 29 (A.P.) (U. S. Dept. of Agriculture).—Small quantities of the new wool continued to move in to Boston, but the market was mostly dull and interest was restricted to a few buyers. Recent reports received by members of the wool trade from the country indicated that prices had become firmer to slightly higher in some sections and that it was generally becoming more difficult to buy good wool in quantity at the low prices recently quoted.

Robey's Review

Interpretation of President's Order on Service Industries as a Cracking-up of NRA Does Not Do Full Justice to the Action.

By Ralph Wera Robey.

It perhaps was inevitable that the elimination of the service industries from various of the provisions of their codes should be interpreted as a cracking up of the NRA. In fact, if one looks at it only from the point of view of what the NRA has been trying to do, this is about the only interpretation that can be placed upon the action. There is, however, another, and it seems to me more reasonable, attitude that one may take. This is that the President's order is a major step toward rescuing the NRA from some of its past absurdities.

From the start it has been evident that the service industries—barber shops, cleaning and dyeing establishments, shoe repairing, &c.—should not be brought under detailed codes. In the first place they are, by and large, of such a purely local character that it would be impossible to draft a code that would fit anything like all the cases. Secondly, most of them are small business units, in which the owner plays an important part as a laborer. Thirdly, there are so many of them that the problem of enforcement would be impossible unless the provisions of the code were so general as to be meaningless. Finally, even in the aggregate their net contribution of purchasing power would be small in proportion to the total for the country.

These Industries Should Have Been Excluded.

It would have been the part of wisdom, therefore, if all these organizations had been permitted to remain free from the provisions of any code. And had the NRA not been diverted from its original purpose—a means for overhauling chaotic industries—and made into a business recovery measure, it is probable that the service industries would not have been put under codes. Once the Administration decided to use NRA as a great recovery plan, however, and invented the Blue Eagle as a lever for forcing everyone under codes, it was hopeless to expect these industries would be left out of the fold.

The result, of course, has been just as was anticipated by everyone who did not come under the spell of NRA ballyhoo. Officials of NRA, accordingly, have been faced with three alternatives: They could put an army of agents in the field and try to frighten the shops into compliance with the codes; they could permit the continuation of wholesale violations; or they could admit their error and withdraw. If they followed the first course it would mean widespread public resentment because we as a nation are not yet ready to have the Government put an army of blackshirts in the field to enforce its orders; if they permitted wholesale violations it would mean a weakening of the prestige of NRA. The third course, then, was the only road open.

President's Order Does Not Go Far Enough.

Actually, the order of the President goes only part way along this road. In the first place it only suspends those provisions that does not refer to child labor, maximum hours, minimum rates of pay, and the rights of labor to unionize. Further, it still makes it possible for 85 per cent of the members of the service trade in a locality to agree upon a code and have it enforced, at least to the extent of using NRA insignia, upon the rest of the industry.

For this first group of exceptions, those referring to labor conditions, there is much to be said. They may be considered, in a way, as the entrance fee to economic existence in this country. Anyone who can not afford to pay it, simply is not permitted to employ workers. I think there should be such a standard.

The idea that 85 per cent of an industry should be permitted to organize to raise prices, limit service, &c., however, has no place either in these or any other industries. Let us put it in the form of a question: Why should a business organization that complies with all the rules regarding labor conditions, hours and pay not be permitted to charge any price it desires for its product or service? It seems to me that there is only one answer on the negative side to this question. This is that such a practice may hurt other producers and this must not be allowed because it is felt the interest of the entrepreneurs is more important than the interest of consumers.

Goods Markets.

New York, May 29 (A.P.).—Cotton goods continued very quiet with prices firm today. Rayon producers reported fair progress in selling June-July output. Rayon fabrics sold more freely for future delivery. Silk goods were in moderate demand for quick shipment. Wool dress goods were in fair demand and more attention was given to fall coatings to be made. Burlaps were easy and quiet.

Bond Market Is Unchanged; At 86 Level

Increased Federal Sales Drives Turnover to $9,987,000.

New York, May 29 (AP).—Although it was a preholiday bond market—trading being suspended tomorrow for the observance of Memorial Day—the indifference today was just about as pronounced as in recent dull sessions.

Owing to a moderate expansion in the U. S. Government list, total transfers amounted to $9,987,000, par value, against $8,693,000 yesterday. The average for 60 domestic corporate loans was unchanged at 86.

While the majority of other bonds milled about in a moderately irregular range, the Federal section was relatively active at gains ranging from 1-32d to 8-32ds of a point.

Home Loans Advance.

Home Loan Owners 4s scored the best advance. Thursday of this week is the last day on which the corporation can issue a call for the redemption of these bonds on July 1.

If the call is not issued, then the bonds will remain outstanding for another six months except to the extent that holders exercise their conversion privilege. The strength of the issue was assumed to reflect the belief that it would not be called.

In the foreign section there was a flurry in the Argentine group which registered advances of 1½ to 5¼ points. The demand was said to have been in response to the republic's sterling bond refunding plans which were expected to improve the position of the dollar issues. German government 5½s firmed, but the 7s lost more than a point. Italian Kingdom 7s rallied 1½ points, but Italian public utility 7s and Milan city 6½s dropped 2 and 3½ points, respectively.

Prime Investments Steady.

Domestic loans of the prime investment rating were again steady. Union Pacific first 4s and Norfolk & Western consolidated 4s reached new peaks.

Other rail gainers included some liens of Canadian Pacific, Chesapeake Corporation, Burlington, Delaware & Hudson, Hudson & Manhattan, Illinois Central, Missouri Pacific, New York Central and Rio Grande & Western.

Some of the utilities and industrials lagged. Among these were issues of Western Union, Utilities Power & Light, United States Rubber, Lehigh Valley Coal, Postal Telegraph and American Telephone. Improvement was shown by bonds of Consolidated Gas, Paramount, Federal Light and Metropolitan Edison.

Curb's Prices Irregular in Dull Trading

Fluctuations Are Confined to Fractions; Transfers, 126,000 Shares.

New York, May 29 (AP).—Prices closed slightly irregular on the curb exchange today. Fluctuations for the most part were confined to narrow fractions. Dullness prevailed throughout the session.

Quiet profit taking occurred in a few of the recent firm spots, Greyhound Corporation in particular, which dipped more than a point before before recovering partly at the finish. Down Chemical lost 2, while Aluminum Company of America and Sherwin Williams yielded around a point apiece. Singer Manufacturing and Pittsburgh Plate Glass were fairly firm in light dealings.

Among the power group American Gas & Electric and Electric Bond & Share were about unchanged. Hiram Walker, WACO Aircraft and Gulf Oil were a bit lower. Oils and metals generally were steady.

Armour & Co. common and preferred (new shares) were admitted to trading today. The former opened at 6¾ and closed at 6⅝ while the senior issue finished ½ point below the initial sale which was affected at 60½.

Transfers approximated 126,000 shares compared with 138,000 yesterday.

The Dollar Abroad

(Associated Press.)

The dollar showed little change in European exchange markets today. In London the dollar closed at 5.08⅜ to the pound, a gain of ⅛ of a cent from Monday's close of 5.08½. The pound sterling lost ½ a cent in New York, selling at $5.08½.

The price of gold in London rose a halfpenny, to 136 shillings 9 pence a fine ounce (equivalent to $34.79 at the dollar's opening of 5.08¾). The bulk of the gold available, valued at $1,933,250, was taken for American account.

The dollar lost ½ a centime in Paris, closing at the equivalent of 6.60 cents to the franc, compared with 6.59½ cents on Monday. French francs declined .00¼ of a cent in New York, to 6.60 cents.

German marks fell to a new low since the dollar's revaluation, declining in New York to 39.14 cents from 39.23 cents on Monday.

Steel Prices Unchanged.

New York, May 29 (A. P.).—Steel prices unchanged.

Dried Fruits Steady.

World Trade Developments

(Based on radiograms and cablegrams to Department of Commerce.)

Wholesale demand in Brazil showed a further slight recession in May, affecting adversely all branches of the domestic textile industry, but the demand for manufactured lines of construction materials remained active; foreign trade this year has been somewhat smaller than last, especially in imports, and the favorable balance has increased.

Business sentiment in Argentina improved during May owing to better cereal prices and heavy outbound charterings for later shipments; actual exports declined, while imports tended to advance.

Uruguayan business during May was hampered by the increasing shortage of exchange and depreciation of the peso; foreign trade during the first quarter of the year showed an increase over last year, especially in connection with shipments to and from the United States.

In the central zone of Chile the turnover in retail sales expanded and wholesale orders were stimulated owing largely to greater liberality in internal credits and a freer policy of exchange control.

The business situation in Bolivia remains unsatisfactory, with insufficient supplies of exchange practically prohibiting imports.

Conditions in Peru have tended to improve further, despite temporary setbacks due to uncertainties regarding the settlement of difficulties with Colombia.

Doubt and uncertainty have replaced the optimism of recent months in Ecuador as a result of a prohibition of the importation of a wide variety of articles.

Business tension in Colombia was relieved during May through the negotiation of a frontier settlement with Peru, and gains were recorded in certain directions.

Conditions in Central America are generally better than at this time last year, although in most countries there has been a tendency toward seasonal subsidence.

Curtailed sugar operations in Cuba during May accentuated the seasonal slackening in business activity, but the decline has been less pronounced than in recent years.

Haiti is relatively prosperous at the present time with imports considerably larger than a year ago and exports slightly better.

The situation in Jamaica is better than a year ago and in Trinidad conditions are improving.

The silver market in China has become steadier and the financial outlook of the Chinese Government Railways has improved.

The foreign trade of British Malaya was 20 per cent larger in the first quarter of this year than in the same period of 1933, owing largely to heavier United States purchases of rubber and tin.

The announcement of the rubber restriction plan in Netherland India has produced a generally favorable reaction.

The rice market in French Indo-China is quiet, but prices improved somewhat during April, exports from Saigon in the first four months of this year have not quite reached last year's level.

Encouraging factors in the Philippine outlook include the release of funds for emergency public works and other purposes and the expansion of gold mining activity, but they are insufficient to offset losses in the export trade.

Unemployment in the United Kingdom on April 23 was the lowest since September, 1930, and showed a decline of over a half million as compared with a year earlier. Polish foreign trade in the first quarter of 1934 shows a favorable balance somewhat larger than that in the corresponding period of last year.

Difficulties in the Danish labor situation have been settled satisfactorily and a favorable reaction on general business conditions has ensued.

Stocks—Trading was the lightest since June 2, 1924. The turnover decreased to 379,252 shares. Losses averaged three-tenths of a point. The market remained in the rut.

Bonds—Dullness marked dealing, and the price average was unchanged at the 86 level. A heavier Federal loan sale increased the volume of sales to $9,987,000.

Curb—Prices closed slightly irregular. Fluctuations, for the most part, were confined to fractions. Sales totaled 126,000 shares.

Wheat—Reports that Russia is buying breadstuffs from the Southern Hemisphere gave wheat a push and prices jumped a maximum of 3 cents. The market closed, after some profit sales, ¼ lower to 1⅜ higher. May wheat sold at 98 to 98¼; September, at 97⅝. Corn and oats advanced.

Cotton—Prices swung narrowly in dull trading, rising slightly in the last of the session. July sold at 11.44. The general market rose 1 to 2 points. October closed at 11.64.

Rubber—Crude rubber futures closed unchanged to 9 points higher. July sold at 12.10; September, at 12.38.

Sugar—Raw sugar was unchanged at 2.75; refined sold at 4.10.

Gold—Bar gold sold in the United States at $35 per ounce. It sold in London at 136 shillings and 9 pence.

Dollar—The United States dollar was higher on foreign exchanges. It stood in New York, with reference to other currencies, $5.07⅞ to the English pound; 6.59¼ cents to the French franc, and 39.12 cents to the German mark.

Wheat Prices Close Higher In Late Sales

News of Russia's Buying From Other Nations Aids Advance.

Chicago, May 29 (AP).—Aroused by reports that Russia was purchasing Southern Hemisphere breadstuffs, the Chicago wheat market jumped nearly 3 cents late today, outdoing season top price records. For a brief period, excitement in the wheat pit surpassed anything witnessed for months.

The Russian purchases, which included three cargoes of Argentine wheat and one cargo of Australian wheat and flour, acted as more than a counterbalance for fears of wheat imports into the United States from Argentina and other foreign countries.

These fears had temporarily pulled wheat down about 1½ cents before the late flurried rally.

Rapid Upturns of Wheat.

Rapid upturns of wheat values just preceding the close were accelerated by assertions of some trade leaders that drought in this country, if much longer unrelieved, might assume proportions of a National calamity.

Wheat closed irregular at some reaction from the day's maximum, ¼ lower to 1⅛ higher, compared with yesterday's finish; corn, ⅛ off to ⅜ up; oats, ⅝ to 1¼ advanced, and provisions unchanged to a rise of 7 cents.

Giving sharp emphasis to news that Russia, instead of being an exporter of wheat, had again become an importer was announcement from Moscow that owing to drought damage to crops Russia had raised bread prices and also raised prices beginning June 1. Subsequent reports of Russian purchases of wheat and flour both from Argentina and Australia led instantly to a buying stampede here that much more than wiped out earlier price setbacks. In many quarters, comment was heard that Russia's action served to indicate likelihood world-wide crop damage from drought would sooner or later bring about advances of foreign markets.

Drought Damage Reports.

Alarming advices of drought ravages in the United States and Canada, ignored most of the day on account of possibilities shown that Argentina could profitably ship wheat to New York, were again receiving keen notice when prices suddenly shot skyward as the day approached an end.

The point was stressed that the domestic area involved made the drought unlike anything the country had ever known. There were also authoritative Canadian reports of thousands of acres in imminent danger of total loss.

Late reports from Washington minimized theories of possible imports of wheat by the United States. It was pointed out that Washington officials possessed authority to increase the tariff if certain contingencies threatened.

German Coal Mining Yields Lead to Lignite

Although the output of pit coal in Germany in recent years has notably declined and production of lignite has sharply increased, these two developments are not directly related, according to Vice Consul E. T. Zawadzki, Berlin, in a report made public by the Commerce Department.

It has been calculated, the report states, that 2.1 workmen were employed in the lignite mines of the Rhine for each projected 10,000,000 heat units, as compared to 3.8 workmen in the pit coal mines of the Ruhr Valley. According to the consul's report, the question of fuel efficiency, however, is not absolutely competent in determining whether it would be proper for labor market or other reasons to construct power plants based on lignite or pit coal. This would depend, in the long run, the consul says, upon which fuel could produce and furnish the cheapest current. The cheaper the current, the better the electric power consuming industries of Germany would be able to compete in the foreign markets.

An advantage of lignite, the report states, is that it is very cheap at the place of production. Lignite current can, therefore, be furnished at a lower cost than that which is obtained from pit coal. The large chemical concerns of Central Germany were thus, the consul says, able to profit by the very low cost of lignite current and the ability of the German chemical industry to compete on the world's markets was to a large extent indirectly based on lignite. This fact, the report states, is economically important because the German chemical industry presents one of the most valuable sources of foreign exchange.

Dollar Stands Supreme in World Moneys

U. S. Unit Continues Rise After Announcement of Silver Plan.

By W. R. Huff.

New York, May 29 (AP).—In the face of talk of inflation and currency dilution, the dollar stands today as the most favored monetary unit in the world.

Ever since the defintie proposal in Washington last week of legislation to "nationalize" and provide for purchase of vast amounts of silver, the dollar, through coincidence of strong supporting factors, has been rising in terms of foreign currencies.

The proposed silver legislation has drawn the fire of orthodox economists, yet the foreign exchange markets have manifested increased confidence in the American currency.

Francs Near Export.

The quotation declined to 6.59½ cents, against a theoretical gold point of 6.59 cents; that is, the level at which it would be cheaper for buyers of dollars to send gold to America rather than pay the extra premium on dollar exchange.

At the same time dispatches from Milan announced the tightening of control over the lira, forbidding all operations in foreign exchange in Italy, except those arising from genuine commercial requirements or for travel abroad, requiring the declaration of foreign balances and prohibiting the purchase of securities abroad.

Lira Well Supported.

The lira is well supported by a strong reserve in the Bank of Italy. Its persistent discount at 4 per cent or so below par has been regarded without excitement because of the stringent control exercised over the currency's movements by the Fascist authorities.

The need for still stricter control was interpreted in the market as pointing to the gradually undermining influence of trade stagnation and the difficulty of competing with devalued currencies, like the dollar and the pound sterling.

Last week the German mark touched a new low since devaluation of the dollar.

Part of the weakness in France has been due to operations in support of the pound sterling by the British exchange control which has been selling francs in Paris and buying sterling. This has been to offset offerings of pound arising from the outflow of capital from London and commercial buying of dollars. Consequently, the franc held steady against the pound and has declined with sterling against the dollar.

Exchange Will Close.

New York, May 29 (AP).—The New York Coffee & Sugar Exchange and the New York Cocoa Exchange will be closed on Saturdays during June, July, August and September, it was announced today.

Baltimore Grain Prices.

Baltimore, May 29—WHEAT—Shipments from elevators, 12,317 bushels. Stock in elevators, 559,419 bushels.

Opening prices were: No. 2 red winter garlicky, spot, domestic, 95¼; May delivery, domestic, 95¼.

Receipts of wheat from nearby sections running light, and demand for No. 2 red winter garlicky, is fair. Off grades, however, are hard to move at a wider discount.

CORN—Shipments from elevators, 602 bushels. Stock in elevators, 8,916 bushels.

Receipts of corn from the nearby sections only occasional. For yellow and high-colored mixed there is a fair domestic demand.

COB CORN—Quoted at 3.35 per barrel for carloads prime nearby yellow on spot. Offerings ample for present needs. Demand limited.

No. 2 yellow corn (old) arriving here by car quoted at 70@71 per bushel with basis billing.

OATS—Receipts, 3,599 bushels by car. Shipments from elevators, 1,008 bushels. Stock in elevators, 35,566 bushels.

No. 2 white oats, 50@55, per bushel, as to weight and location.

Note—On all sales of oats to the local trade, excepting those on track, there is an additional charge of 1½ per bushel for storage and elevation, which is paid by the buyer.

RYE—Receipts, 284 bushels by car. Shipments from elevators, 3,600 bushels. Stock in elevators, 284,907 bushels.

HAY—General hay market is steady. Supply ample. On good timothy and clover mixed prices range from $12 to $14 per ton. The poorer grades of hay are hard to sell at any price. Market irregular on everything below 3 timothy.

New York Produce.

New York, May 29 (A.P.).—EGGS—Receipts, 7,119; market firm; mixed colors, special packs or selections from fresh receipts, 18½@20½; standards and commercial standards, 18; other mixed colors, unchanged.

WHITE EGGS—Resale of premium marks, 22½@24; nearby special packs, including premiums, 21@22; nearby and midwestern henmery, exchange specials, 19½@20; nearby and midwestern exchange standards, 17@18; marked mediums, 16½@17½; browns, resale of premium marks, 24@25; other whites and browns, unchanged.

DRESSED POULTRY—Market slow; turkeys, fresh, 13@20; other grades, unchanged.

LIVE POULTRY—Market, firm; broilers, freight, 15@21; turkeys, express, unquoted; other freight and express, unchanged.

SUGAR—Raw was steady today, but as refiners were unwilling to pay above last prices, spot levels were unchanged at 2.75. Holders were asking 2.80 and a sale was confirmed of 6,000 bags of Puerto Rican at 2.80a level, due June 11 to an operator. In refined a better demand was reported with prices unchanged at 4.10 for fine granulated.

COFFEE—Spot steady; Rio No. 7, 10¼@10¾; Santos No. 4, 11½. Rio futures closed barely steady; sales, 4,000 bags. July, 8.40; September, 8.47; December, 8.54; March, 8.64; May, 8.71. Santos futures easy; sales, 17,000 bags. July, 10.86; September, 11.34; December, 11.45; March, 11.51; May, 11.57.

*Nominal.

Baltimore Tobacco.

Baltimore, Md., May 29 (Spl.).—Leaf tobacco:

Under active competition prices for all cigarette grades of firm leaf were higher, up to 1½ cents, the last two days. Quotations revised accordingly.

Ohio—Nothing to report.

Maryland—Firm. Leaf, nondescript, $4.00@4.50; common to medium, 4.50@6.00; medium to good, 21.00@40.00; good to fine red, 41.00@54.00. Seconds, common and diseased, 3.00@7.00; medium to good, 8.00@20.00; good to fine, 21.00@30.00.

H. B.—Unsound and badly mixed packages from 2 to 3 cents lower.

LEGAL NOTICES

National Press Building.

IN THE SUPREME COURT OF THE DISTRICT OF COLUMBIA, holding an Equity Court. Annie Leckert et al., plaintiffs, vs. Katherina Hatsfeld Nasiyoski et al., defendants. Equity No. 55573. Order of publication. The object of this suit is to obtain a decree for the sale of certain real estate in the District of Columbia, known and described as part of original lot 1, in square 874, beginning for the same at the northeast corner of said lot, running thence westerly along the line of Pennsylvania avenue 70 feet 11 inches, thence southerly parallel with the west line of said lot about 71 feet 7 inches to D street, thence easterly along the line of D street 80 feet, thence northerly along the line of Seventh street, 23 feet 6 inches to the place of beginning, and for the division of the proceeds of sale thereof, together with the rents, income and profits thereof, among the parties entitled thereto according to their respective interests, and for the construction of the last will and testament of Bartholomew Hamm, deceased, and to determine the persons entitled to said proceeds of sale, rents, income and profits. On motion of the plaintiffs it is this 7th day of May, A. D. 1934, ordered that the defendants, Magdalena Lutz, Josef Lutz and Ludwig Hamm, all infants, cause their appearance to be entered herein on or before the fortieth day, exclusive of Sundays and legal holidays, occurring after the day of the first publication of this order; otherwise the cause will be proceeded with as in case of default. Provided, a copy of this order be published once a week for three successive weeks in the Washington Law Reporter and The Washington Post before said day. JENNIE D. BAILEY, Justice. A true copy. Test: (Seal.) FRANK E. CUNNINGHAM, Clerk. By H. E. DEETZ-RAUCH, Assistant Clerk. 16,23,30

The terrific cost of war can best be realized in the figures which show that for every man killed in the World War about $25,000 was spent by the governments involved. A little more than eight and a half million men were killed in the World War. The losses to the allies were 5,152,000 killed and died. The Central Powers lost 3,386,000 men.

Total casualties, which include wounded, prisoners and missing men, were 37,494,000 for both sides.

Austro-Hungary's casualties were highest, for nine out of every ten men in her army were killed, wounded, taken prisoner, or reported missing. Japan's casualties were lowest; only one out of every 650 men was listed as a casualty.

* * * *

The earthworm has the power to grow a new tail when its tail is cut off—a power which is common among lower form of animal life. The tail which is cut off also continues to grow, but by some biological quirk it does not grow a new head. Instead it grows another tail—and when this is done the worm has two tails and no head. Because of this it cannot eat, and therefore dies of starvation.

The head end from which the tail has been cut functions normally again when a new tail has been grown by it.
